DARLING OF SOCIETY SEES LOVE TURN COLD

Mrs. Carter Leidy, former "Fifi" Widener, society's pampered pet, who is seeking divorce as climax to spectacular elopement. Her romance lasted just five years. She spent her honeymoon in a cottage while her college-boy husband toiled in a steel mill at $2.50 per day. She was her own cook, maid, etc. —but now she's had enough. Below is shown her husband, a college freshman when he and Fifi ran away to wed.

MAN AIDS LOVE SLAYER'S FLIGHT

ARMED MOTHER OF 5, WHO KILLED RIVAL, IS HUNTED IN LAWRENCE

The search for Mrs. Rose Candia of No. 56 Bremen street, East Boston, slayer of Mrs. Rose Trosi of East Boston, mother of two children, was taken up today in Lawrence, where Mrs. Candia is believed to be in hiding.

Following the shooting that left Trosi's operator gasping, Mrs. Candia, pocket mother of five children, walked calmly away and was joined by a man, who apparently assisted in her escape.

It is believed the woman was secreted and then spirited to Lawrence by way of Lynn. Several police bulletins and details are tracing the slayer's movements.

The Trosi and Candia women engaged in a street row in East Boston. Mrs. Trosi, police declare, ac-

PAINLEVE CABINET RESIGNS IN FRANCE

Paris, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—Premier Paul Painleve and his cabinet resigned to President Doumerge today.

The Premier informed the President that the cabinet could not continue its work of restoring the French finances without being assured of a favorable majority in Parliament.

That the retiring finance minister, Caillaux, is still a power to be reckoned with was shown when he was summoned by President Doumergue immediately after the departure of Premier Painleve from his resignation visit.

The decision of the ministers to

'FIFI' SEEKS DIVORCE; 5-YEAR ROMANCE ENDS

Morristown, Pa., Oct. 27.—"Fifi" has had enough.

So also has Carter himself—perhaps.

For five years "Fifi" Widener, darling of society, has been molding a rose-colored vessel of romance, but today she dropped it with gusto and tossed the shattered bits out with the morning ashes.

"Fifi" wants a divorce and she went to Montgomery County Court today with her papers in the first step to put her youthful husband, Carter Randolph Leidy, in the place where all aggrieved wives want to put their husbands, wherever that may be.

Thus—in a sheaf of papers—has pretty "Fifi," who eluded a small army of guards and detectives in 1920 to elope with her freshman Romeo, clawed into shreds her pretty garment of Spring.

Very secret are the papers and the charges and the allegations and all that in the surprise case—oh, very secret.

They are even so secret that they

20 KILLED AS TRAIN PLUNGES 40 FEET

Memphis, Tenn., Oct 27 (A.P.).—Twenty dead and more than thirty injured was the known toll taken when the Sunnyland, fast St. Louis & San Francisco passenger train, left the rails today near Victoria, Miss., and tumbled into a tangled mass down a forty-foot embankment.

At least twenty persons, all from the South, were killed outright or died before a relief train could reach the scene and possibly twice that number were injured.

The train, traveling at about 50

Coolidge Fumbles on Vermont Pie

Washington, Oct. 27.—Calvin Coolidge, well-known Republican of Washington, Massachusetts and Vermont, went totally democratic today and the entire apple pie situation was shaken down to the lower crust.

So badly did the President stumble and stub his toe against a cherished New England tradition and against the smouldering fury of woman, that Heaven only knows what the result will be when he next meets the ladies from the University of Vermont.

Hades hath no fury like a woman scorned, they say, but when the decadent apple pie—sacred emblem and piece-de-resistance of Yankeeland's breakfast—is kicked smartly in the slats in the bargain, their fruity is damage done.

To get down to the core of the apple pie bloomer—the Girls' Club of the University of Vermont, in all enthusiasm, sent to President and the Missus a telegram, offering a pure apple pie, made by their own golden hands, for consumption at the Presidential Thanksgiving meal.

Now, indigestion or no indigestion—to be dyspeptic or not to be dyspeptic—no one would decline such a toothsome offer, and even in the unthinkable event that he were forced to decline, he would write long lines and many folios of tearful ap-

UNITED FRUIT CO. OWNS PHONE, RADIO LINES

New York, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—After a morning session devoted to tracing the foreign holdings of the International Western Electric Company, the Federal Trade Commission's inquiry into the radio industry swung today to the United Fruit Company and its affiliations.

Arthur E. Nicholson of Boston, assistant secretary and treasurer, testified that the company was a grower and producer of tropical fruits, but also operated hospitals, telephone systems, railroads, radio stations and ships lines. It owns ports, he said, in Cuba, Columbia, Costa Rica, Panama and Guatemala.

MOTOR STOCKS SOAR TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

STOCK MARKETS AT A GLANCE

IN NEW YORK

STOCKS—Strong despite profit-taking. United Drug up 7 points to new high. Woolworth up 7 to new high. Radio ran off over 3.

BONDS—French issues nervously sold. Market mixed.

COTTON — Quotations fairly steady.

FOREIGN EXCHANGES—Sterling stays firm.

IN BOSTON

STOCKS—New Haven active and up around a point. Atlas Tack suddenly lively and at top on move.

BONDS—Trading rather dull.

RED METAL—Quotations hold firm.

New York, Oct. 27 (A.P.)—Realizing sales and bear selling assumed larger proportions in today's stock market, checking the advance in a number of issues. Motors continued to surge upwards, Hudson soaring 6 points, Chrysler mounting to a new high level at 223¾, and General Motors touching a new peak at 138.

While there was nothing in the day's news to influence the selling movement, a lightening of long accounts was suggested by several of the larger commission houses on the theory that the market was entitled to at least a technical reaction after the recent sustained advance.

Some of the liquidation undoubtedly was also inspired by the stiffer call money rates, which are likely to continue until after the first of the month.

Coast Guard Boats and Plane Search Sea for 3 Men Adrift

Their search radiating from a point 12 miles east of Peaked Hill Bar Buoy, on the tip of Cape Cod, the Coast Guard cutter Acushnet, two 75-foot patrol boats and a Coast Guard seaplane are today seeking a small ship's boat with three members of the crew of the three-masted schooner J. C. Webster in her.

The trio have been adrift since 4:30 last Sunday morning at which time the gale was at its height.

Full details of the wreck are lacking. At the headquarters of the local Coast Guard district in the Customs House tower, Captain P. H. Uberath has merely a brief radio from the Coast Guard cutter Red Wing to guide him.

The Red Wing reported she was towing the disabled schooner to Rockland, Maine, and that the three

KELIHER DENIES HE PLANS TO QUIT RACE

Sheriff John A. Keliher is about to withdraw from the mayoralty race and throw his support to one of the other Democratic candidates, according to a well-circulated report today.

The sheriff, however, emphatically and unqualifiedly denied that he was out of the race.

It may be the wish was father to the thought, as the elimination of Keliher would help not one but several candidates, according to political experts.

While the sheriff's personal endorsement would probably go to Theodore A. Glynn, it is believed a considerable portion of his following would refuse to submit to a delivery. The backers of Joseph H. O'Neil believe that their candidate would benefit from the demolition, should it arise, while the followers of District Attorney O'Brien are also hopeful.

Keliher's campaign is said to be at a complete standstill, but as a matter of fact virtually all the other

THREATENS GENERAL IRONWORKERS' STRIKE

A general strike of all ironworkers on jobs where non-union men are also employed was threatened today in Boston.

James A. Murphy, business agent of Ironworkers' Local No. 7, declared to the Boston Evening American that a general strike hinges on action of his local.

Should his union request the walkout, he said, the Building Trades Council has declared itself as ready to give the order. Such a demonstration by the iron workers would

SHOWER $1,400 ON PASSER IN GAMING RAID

Louis De Lucca, young North End boy, was showered with a fall of crisp banknotes, $1,400 worth in all, as he walked through an alley in the rear of 114 State street this afternoon. Someone "tipped off" a policeman and Louis and the $1,400 went to the Sears street station. There it was found the money was thrown from a window in the Richards building when police raided an office where a group of men were gambling. Eight were arrested. Raiders seized more than $2,000.

FIFI WIDENER IN SOCIETY ROMANCE IS SEEKING FREEDOM

ELOPED WHEN SHE WAS 17

have been impounded. But the law firm of High, Bettes & Swartz, who will tell "Fifi's" side of the story, admitted that the action has been started.

"Fifi" was only seventeen when she eloped on January 29, 1920, on the eve of what was to be her debut into society.

For a year previous, because of her infatuation for Carter Randolph Leidy son of a Philadelphia physician and member of one of the oldest line Quaker families, "Fifi" had been under constant surveillance of guards wherever she moved.

Once she eluded the guards at Lenox, Mass., and slid down a rope of knotted bed sheets for a tryst with her college freshman sweetheart, but she dropped into the arms of the waiting guards, thus failing to score a touchdown.

Leidy was a nice boy, her papa, the Philadelphia traction magnate, agreed, but like an architect, he had other plans and daughter was headed for marriage with someone more than a scion of a Quaker family, well-to-do, of course, but not with as much money as the Wideners.

ELUDE DAD AND ELOPE.

For a year things went on in this fashion, but "Fifi" was seventeen—and seventeen gets what it goes after, usually.

"Fifi's" last stand was a demand that young Leidy be allowed to take a night off from being a freshman and be invited to her debut reception. The response by "Dudda" was as flat as cold coffee.

That night "Fifi" became real indignant and jilted 'em and fast. With her flitted the romantic Carter. When they reached Knoxville, Tenn., they applied the brakes and were married.

Then they went to Asheville, N. C. to await forgiveness. There being nothing else to do, the parents of both sent their blessings.

"Fifi's" next sensation was in becoming her own cook, bottle washer, housekeeper and sworn enemy of the ash and garbage collector, by setting up housekeeping in a tiny cottage at Berwick, while Carter went to work at $2.50 a day in the steel mills.

Two years of this sufficed, however, and while of late the Carter Leidys have not been seen together as much as usual, there was no divorce anticipated.

But—gosh, you never can tell about "Fifi."

SLAYER FORGOT THESE WHEN SHE FIRED

When Mrs. Rose Candia fired three bullets into the heart of Mrs. Rose Trosi, whose husband she is alleged to have tried to win, she didn't remember her five little children awaiting her return to their home, No. 56 Bremen street, East Boston, and the two little children her shots left motherless. Four of the Candia children are shown above. They are, left to right, Marietta, three; Josephine, two; Marion, five, and Frank, four years old. The larger photograph is of Lucy Trosi, three, daughter of the slain woman.

Relatives who live in Lynn and Lawrence were communicated with. Warned that Mrs. Candia is still in possession of a revolver, the same officers were instructed to proceed prudently should they encounter her.

Threaten General Strike of Iron Workers effectively cripple the building program in Greater Boston.

The difference between the workers and employers were still unsolved today and the strike that began with a walkout of ironworkers on the Five Cents Saving Bank, the University Club and the new Elks' Home remained a deadlock.

MEETING TONIGHT.

The advisory committee of the striking workers was to meet tonight to take action on the contractors, W. A. and H. A. Root, paying $1.25 an hour to substitute workers while only $1.10 an hour was paid to the men that struck, but today W. A. Root declared that the substitutes had been let go because they were not satisfactory.

A rate of $1.25 an hour is demanded by the strikers, and the strike came when, according to Business Agent Murphy, the contractors acceded to the request of the Building Trades Employers' Association and cut the scale to $1.10.

John F. Walsh, secretary of the employers' organization, issued the following statement today, however:

100 ON THE JOB.

"The situation late today is that 100 ironworkers are on jobs of members of this association at $1.10 per hour. Employers are instructed to take Local No. 7 men at $1.10 per hour as long as the jobs last but will not pay any higher rate at this time.

"The work is progressing satisfactorily, and the association is confident that all of its members will be amply supplied with ironworkers within the next few days. The association will protect the work of all its members and give them every assistance in maintaining their legal contract rights with all steel companies with whom they are doing business.

"The strike committee is insistent that erectors shall use ironworkers at $1.10 per hour on the work of all members of the association in order that the peace pact agreements that have been signed with the other nine trades at $1.10 per hour may be properly lived up to and maintained.

"I want to make it clear that the association is not refusing to take back any members of Local No. 7, but refuses absolutely to pay the demanded wage of $1.25 per hour."

New York, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—Funeral services were conducted in a Broadway funeral church today for Mrs. Lillian N. Duke, divorced wife of the late James B. Duke, tobacco magnate. The services were attended by only twenty-five persons. Several music students who studied under Mrs. Duke were present.

ology for being so heartless as to spurn the gift.

But a few words suffice for the President's turning back of the gift and things are at a crisis in the feminine section of the U. of V., with no telling where it will end.

Some "unofficial observer" let it out that the spurning of the offer came because acceptance might have been taken as endorsement of various movements throughout the country, inasmuch as the girls said the apple pie gift was designed to be part of the Apple Pie Week program.

For instance the gifts, starting from this comparatively minor gift of a pie, might progress to some and roasts up through pants and suspenders and washing machines and automobile and brick houses. And someone might even donate a corkscrew.

But the indignant girls in Vermont don't see that precedent stuff. Coolidge threw out the first ball in the World Series, they argue, but not yet he down to toot the first kick-off in the Harvard-Yale game.

That may be a suggestion, at that!

CABINET QUITS IN FRANCE

resign was unanimous. It was caused by the attitude taken by the radical and Socialist parties at their recent congress in Nice, where the principle of a tax levy on capital was adopted.

On the Painleve Ministry was formed on April 16 of this year to succeed that of Edouard Herriot, which also went down through the refusal of Parliament to accept its financial policy.

Like its predecessor, the Cabinet which steps down today depended for its Parliamentary majority largely on the parties of the left, including the Radicals and Radical-Socialists.

Joseph Caillaux, Painleve's minister of finance and one of the outstanding personalities of the government, has steadfastly resisted the left block in its desire to resort to a levy on capital as a means of lifting France out of its financial difficulties.

Paris dispatches for the last few days have made it plain that the premier and Foreign Minister Briand were not in sympathy with M. Caillaux's plans, the details of which have been kept largely in the dark during their consideration by the Cabinet.

20 KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

or 60 miles an hour, apparently spread the track about 200 feet from a 40-foot trestle. The engine cleared the trestle, as did the first baggage coach. The engine did not leave the track. Three baggage coaches and nine day coaches and Pullmans made up the train.

All coaches except the last Pullman rolled down the 40-foot embankment.

The three day coaches were a tangled mass of wreckage. One of them was plunged headlong into the clay bank by the side of the track and the others rolled and jammed as they struck the bottom, piling the occupants into the tops and ends of the cars.

Few of the passengers sleeping in the last three Pullmans suffered serious injury and it was these who directed the rescue and first aid work before relief trains arrived.

SAW CARS TELESCOPE.

H. B. Herring, engineer, said that the first intimation he had of the impending wreck was when he heard the air connection between the tender and baggage car snap.

"As I looked back I saw my train telescope and crash down the embankment," Herring said.

At the time the train, according to the engineer, was traveling at between 45 and 50 miles an hour, and had passed the station at Victoria at 6:36 a. m., about two minutes late.

Passengers who escaped from the Pullman cars uninjured roused the residents of the village and stopped all passing vehicles for rescue work. In a short time a crowd had gathered and the injured were wrapped in bedding and carried to the station.

SCHOOL IS HOSPITAL.

All available ambulances and doctors from Memphis and towns near Victoria were pressed into service and the injured were rushed to Memphis for treatment.

The dead and dying were taken to a nearby schoolhouse, converted into a temporary hospital.

Rescue work was continued during the day as train cranes and rescue workers dug about the wreckage and cut away doors, searching for victims buried in the clay bank or covered with debris.

WOMAN DENIES BEING WIFE OF FOUR, IS HELD

New York, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—Virginia Thorne, telephone operator, alleged to have had four husbands without being either widowed or divorced, pleaded not guilty when arraigned today in General Sessions Court on a charge of bigamy. Bail of $1,000 was continued.

While in court the girl was served with complaint for annulment of marriage by Harry Rosenberg, who avowed that he was husband No. 4.

ROME CAPTAIN MISTOOK S51 FOR TOWBOAT

Third Officer of Liner Tells of Crash That Cost 33 Lives

Captain J. H. Diehl of the steamer City of Rome, was directing the course of that vessel when it run down and sank the submarine S51 with a loss of 33 lives.

Testimony to this effect was given by Timothy L. Drier of Savannah, Ga., third officer of the steamer, before the court of inquiry at the Navy Yard today.

Drier, who said he had followed the sea for forty years and held a master's license for twenty-five years, testified he relieved Quartermaster Hanson at the wheel at 10:02, the latter being taken sick.

Two minutes later, he said, Captain Diehl entered the wheelhouse and said:

"There's a white light to the starboard side."

Drier said he replied that he saw the light, and Capt. Diehl picked up the binoculars and examined it closely. The witness quoted the captain as saying it must be a towboat, but said he expressed the opinion that it was a coastguard craft.

A short time later the Third Officer said Capt. Diehl ordered him to put the wheel over to starboard. In a few minutes the master shouted: "Hard aport," he testified.

Drier said he was spinning the wheel, when the quartermaster returned and the collision occurred. That was at 10:24 p. m., the night of September 25.

The possibility of anyone being alive on the submarine after the crash was not discussed by Diehl, First Officer Raymond G. Kent testified.

After describing how he was awakened by danger signals, First Officer Kent said he was thrown to the floor when the steamer struck the submarine.

He went on deck, he said, and on order of Captain Diehl took command of the lifeboat, which cruised about for an hour, returning with the three sailors taken from the water.

The steamer was then put on her course for Boston, and the witness said he and Captain Diehl did not discuss the question of whether anyone was alive on the submarine.

Chief Engineer William Bell had previously testified that he heard someone on the S51 shout for a line immediately after the crash.

He testified the voice cried:

"Throw us a line and throw it quick."

THUG, VICTIM DYING AFTER GUN DUEL

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 27 (A.P.).—A store proprietor and a man who is alleged to have attempted to hold him up are both in a dying condition in Memorial Hospital here from bullet wounds inflicted upon one another. A third man, companion of the alleged thug, is sought.

Albert Abood, the storekeeper, has a bullet in the abdomen, and surgeons will try to remove it to save his life. Alfred Brouillard, twenty-six, the alleged thug, has a bullet in the jaw and another in the left leg.

Abood was held up several weeks ago and when two young men entered his little shop at Dexter and Barton streets at about 11:30 o'clock, and asked for candy, he reached instinctively for the revolver which he had procured against such an emergency. With no more parley, according to the story he told the police, one of the men, alleged to be Brouillard, fired and wounded him.

Abood hirzed away in return and the alleged bandits fled. Abood was rushed to the hospital. The police went there to get his story and soon after arrival a taxicab brought Brouillard, who said that as he was entering a Dexter street store to buy cigarettes the proprietor fired upon two young men in the store and wounded him.

Taken before Abood, Brouillard was identified as the alleged thug who fired.

COP SAVES 7 FROM GAS DEATH IN CHELSEA HOUSE

Seven persons, three of them children, narrowly escaped asphyxiation today from gas fumes which they claimed came from a leaky pipe in the cellar of a three-story building in Pembroke street, Chelsea. Patrolman John McGreevey smelled gas coming from the house and aroused the occupants. On the first floor were Joseph Inno and his brother Matthew. Mrs. Mary Slovasky and her three young children were asleep on the second floor. McGreevey led them all to the street through the gas-filled corridors. Joseph Inno required the services of a physician.

Drunk For 55th Time, Gets One More Chance

Haverhill, Oct. 27.—Ambrose Jarvis, fiddler extraordinary, whose carefree tunes have delighted thousands, was arraigned before Judge John J. Winn on a drunkenness charge for the fifty-fifth time. Pleading guilty Jarvis was given another chance by the court and his case was placed on file. Judge Winn told the violinist not to come into court again.

Jarvis, had his fiddle with him. He is never without it. He keeps it under his coat, and when sent to jail always takes it, too. He was arrested while giving a sidewalk concert near City Hall.

TAX COLLECTOR GUILTY OF SIX LARCENIES

After deliberating only twenty minutes, a jury in Middlesex Superior Court today returned guilty verdicts in six counts of larceny against Lester E. Gerald, chairman of the Wayland board of selectmen and former tax collector.

Gerald's defalcations were alleged to have totalled $6,000 over a period of eleven years in office.

The Wayland official heard the verdicts without emotion and remained calm when Judge George A. Flynn held him in $75,000 pending sentence tomorrow.

Trial occupied only a few hours, and Gerald, testifying in his own behalf, made a flat denial of the alleged larcenies.

Edward H. Fenton, chief auditor for the State Department of Accounts, testified in opening that he audited the former tax collector's books and found a total shortage of $60,000 back through the eleven years.

One item of $18,000, the auditor said, Did not even been entered on the books, but other items had been entered and the money not turned into the Wayland treasury.

In his own defense, Gerald, who said he was an optometrist with place of business in Temple place, declared his books had not been audited in all the eleven years and that the supposed shortage must have come about in bookkeeping.

Two-thirds of the tax payments are by check, he testified, and he always deposited the checks in the Natick Trust Company.

He said that perhaps he had received deposits on taxes and had credited the tax payers with payments in full.

The case was expected to go to the jury late today.

seamen had taken to the small boat.

The J. O. Webster is owned by J. O. Webster of Miami, Fla. She left St. John, N. B., on October 7 and is presumed to be loaded with lumber. Nothing was heard of her until today when the Red Wing's radio announced that the cutter had picked her up in latitude 42.29, longitude, 68.57, a point approximately 100 miles North Northeast of Peaked Hill Bar Buoy.

Indications are that the schooner first encountered difficulty at the point nearer Cape Cod and since that time has drifted almost ninety miles. Captain Uberath has no positive information regarding the exact time the Red Wing with her tow is due in Rockland.

The schooner was formerly the Britisher Charles F. Gordon and was built in 1919 at Weymouth, N. S.

GREEKS YIELD AS LEAGUE THREATENS

Evacuation of Forces in Bulgaria Ordered; Frontier Guards Withdrawn

Athens, Oct. 27 (A.P.)—The Greek government today ordered the prompt evacuation o fBulgarian territory by its forces. The movement to withdraw the Greek frontier guards to their former posts has been begun.

Paris, Oct. 27 (A.P.)—A naval demonstration before Athens is a possible League of Nations move should the government of Premier Pangalos decline to bow to the league council's decision that it must cease all hostilities and remove all Greek forces from Bulgarian soil.

The council hopes that the Greek government will accept the decision, but it was learned in authoritative circles today that the advisability of a naval blockade has already been discussed privately by the council.

Although M. Carapanos, the Greek Minister, told the council today that both Greece and Bulgaria had reached a direct accord through the good offices of Rumania to suspend hostilities and retire behind their frontiers, the Bulgarian representatives said that they had no confirmation of this report.

M. Motloff, speaking for the Sofia government, informed the council that a direct entente with Greece was utterly impossible because of Greece's persistent refusal to listen to Bulgaria's repeated offers to appoint a joint commission to inquire into the border trouble.

He demanded that, independently of any penalties which the council might apply to Greece for her "grave blow at international peace, and violation of her league obligations," complete reparation should be accorded Bulgaria for the damages to persons and property, and all prisoners should be immediately released.

PAUL REVERE IS GIVEN FROST IN HALL OF FAME

Gallop as Paul Revere would all through the countryside, he didn't quite gallop into the Hall of Fame, but when asked today for the reason, the Hall of Fame electors of New York University made a loud, roaring noise, such as that emitted by a boisterous, cheering oyster.

"Oh, Paul Revere," was the sense of their lifted eyebrows and silent lips, the kind of a look you'd get from an ex-wife.

John Paul Jones, who wouldn't give up the ship, didn't give it up this time, either, and he sailed stubbornly into the chamber of halos.

Edwin Booth, the actor, slipped into the Hall of Fame's founding wake and as far as the electors are concerned the other twenty-five notables on the nomination including Paul Revere, are sinkers.

Paul Revere's mistake was in getting only one light—that by land.

‚MARRIED? GEE, NO!' SAYS DOT APPLEBY

JUST 'TOLD FIB' ABOUT TED HAYES

Dancing Beauty Admits Loving Dempsey's Ex-Aid, but Insists They're Not Wed

Dorothy Appleby, diminutive eighteen-year-old stage star, and Teddy Hayes, former secretary to Jack Dempsey, are not married and are not likely to be for some time to come, if Mother Appleby has anything to say about it.

They are not even officially engaged, according to the young lady herself, who today denied the report of her marriage to Hayes at Crown Point, Indiana, when confronted with the fact that the authorities at Crown Point had no record of the reported ceremony.

"How did you get married and leave no record?" a reporter from the Boston Evening American demanded of Dorothy in an interview at her room in the Hotel Touraine.

"Oh, Gee," said the high stepping little dancer who has been spending the past few weeks reveling in the report that she and Teddy were one. "I'm an awful little liar, and now that I am caught with the goods I might just as well come clean and tell the truth."

GIVES MOTHER THE WINK.

"You see, it's this way," she continued with a wicked little wink at her mother, Mrs. George F. Appleby, who never leaves her daughter while she is on the road.

The sly wink was not lost on the reporter who said, "Is this going to be the truth or just another awful lie, too?"

"Cross my heart, honest Injun," she said. "I'm scared now and mother knows that I have told her right along that Teddy and I have never been married. Mother wouldn't let me marry, anyhow, for at least a year yet.

"Yes, I do love Teddy. He told me that he had a divorce from his first wife, but I was not sure. I was just stringing the papers along when I told them that we had been married.

MAY WED HIM YET!

"It all started in Chicago when Miss Janis kept joking me about Teddy, and so one night when she asked me when I was going to get married I told her we had been married a week. Then I got scared and let me go right on believing it; only I tol mother the truth."

"How are we going to know that this is the straight story now?" the reporter asked.

"Well, I am sick of being bawled out," she replied, "and you got me dead to rights about there being no record at Crown Point. The reason Teddy and I ever got to there was the Frolics Cabaret in Chicago; but I do love him, and maybe will marry him some day."

Harvard Beaten Again in Hotels

DOROTHY APPLEBY, dancing star, who denies she's married to Teddy Hayes, Jack Dempsey's ex-secretary. "Honest Injun! I'm single," she chirps; but admits she loves Teddy, at that.

GREEN IS ASQUITH'S BETTER AT TIPPING

Crimson Less Generous; Green Better Dancers, but Poor Drinkers, Say Boys

That Dartmouth men were more generous and better dancers than Harvard men is the opinion of the bellhops at the Back Bay hotels, but they hand the palm to the Cantabrigians as showing the greater sobriety.

Ta Crimson College seeking edict after the defeat of their football team visited the hotels.

The bellhop after general discussion with his fellow workers said Dartmouth tipped better than Harvard during the past week end, Friday as well as Saturday, and he attributed this to the fact that Harvard men may possibly treat a hotel as a home and forget that bellboys are not personal servants.

"In their dancing it was the same way as with their football. They had punch, pep, and knew what was coming the next minute," he said. "Harvard was satisfied with bright football and their dancing was the same way. Dartmouth put on stick plays and at the hotel they went in for the Charleston, they put on a snake dance in the Stadium and they also had their snake dance in the hotel."

Talking about schnulants, he said: "I do not know who indulged the most, but I know the Harvard men acted themselves with more dignity than our visitors."

SON PAYS HUB VISIT

Scion of England's Ex-Premier Finds Our Girls 'Charming;' Is Grid 'Fan'

A. Asquith, No. 44 Bedford street, London, was the name inscribed by a slim, blonde youth on the register of the Hotel Touraine today.

Diffidently he requested a room and "bawth," and then immured himself, only to be routed out by indefatigable newspaper men later, to blushingly admit he is the son of Sir Herbert Asquith, former Premier of Great Britain.

A shy, reserved young man, not given to airing his views publicly, A. Asquith submitted to being interviewed with good grace, but apparently found the proceedings painful.

A graduate of Balliol College, Oxford, he admitted he is in this country for a five months' holiday, but, in contrast to other noted visitors, begged to be excused from commenting on America and American customs.

Young Asquith's face brightened when sports were mentioned.

"Yes, I am interested in sports," he said. "I particularly want to see some of your football games. I am looking forward to attending the Harvard game next Saturday as the guest of Sylvester Gates, now a student at Harvard University."

"But I have met so few girls as yet," he protested. "Really, I am in no position to discuss them. Of course they are charming, but I know so little about them."

Plain Mister A. Asquith of No. 44 Bedford street, London, is none other than the son of Sir Herbert Asquith, former British Premier. He blushingly admitted the fact at a Boston hotel today. He's in America for five months, but he won't say yet whether or not he likes us.

15,000 SCHOOL PUPILS IN STATE GOITRE SURVEY

The State Department of Health, guided by Dr. Robert Clerson of the United States Public Health Service, a specialist on the thyroid gland, will start its first endemic goitre survey next Wednesday.

Sixty scattered communities in the State will be visited and the necks of 15,000 high school boys and girls will be examined, Dr. Clerson believing that age to be most susceptible.

The survey is expected to determine whether the proximity of salt water acts as a preventative to the disease.

LYNN DENTIST GULPS POISON

Haverhill, Oct. 27.—Writhing under the bite of a dose of poison taken for a reason that the police maintain is mysterious, Dr. Benjamins Case, 38, a Lynn dentist, is battling for life at the Chie Hospital.

The dentist, stopping with his sister at No. 2 Freeman street, took the poison, according to the police, in his sister's home.

Some time later he walked unaided into the hospital and told of his act.

"I don't want my sister blamed for this," he declared, according to hospital attendants.

The doctor's name is on the danger list.

$50,000 SUIT OF LILLBACK GIVEN JURY

The case of the Rev. John Lillback, formerly of Quincy, who brought a $50,000 damage suit against Etcenpain, a Finnish newspaper, for printing an alleged "confession" letter, went to the jury at 2:30 in Federal Court today.

Counsel for each side were allowed one hour to sum up, after which the jury was instructed, and retired for deliberation.

The letter was written to Mrs. James Tarevanian, and in it the pastor, formerly of Quincy, is alleged to have admitted affairs with many women, many of them members of his congregation.

Marvin Taylor, counsel for Etcenpain, was first to sum up his case and in his argument he characterized the minister as a man who attacked the Socialists and the Socialist paper, but who did not have "manhood and nerve enough to stand back of his damaging assertions."

"No Apache under the sidewalks of New York teaches free love and anarchy such as Lillback charges the Socialists teach," declared the lawyer.

MRS. BARING RECONCILED

"White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 27 (A.P.).—An affidavit filed in County Court today by Clarence O. Baring, who was arrested in 1924, charged with attempting to poison his wife by feeding her disease germs, declared that they had become reconciled and have been living together for the last two months.

The affidavit was in support of a motion for reduction of bail.

Baring's indictment followed charges filed by his wife. He was sent to Matteawan Asylum for observation, but later was returned here to await trial.

Judge Blackley ordered Baring's

GIRL, 7, SAVED UNDER TROLLEY

Hasty application of the airbrake by Michael Boyle, operator of a one-man car on the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, today saved the life of Alvira Bixby, seven-year-old Lynn schoolgirl, who was rescued from beneath the front wheel guard of the trolley car opposite the Avon School in Eastern avenue.

R. E. Blood, wealthy Lynn and Swampscott merchant, who witnessed the accident, snatched the little girl from her perilous position and, placing her in his machine, drove her to the Lynn Hospital, where several stitches were taken in her head and face.

Boyle stopped the electric car so abruptly that its rear truck left the rails. None of the passengers was injured.

BROOKLINE MAN VICTIM OF CARBON MONOXIDE GAS

While passing the private garage of Mrs. Grace Miller at No. 73 Marion street, Brookline, Sergeant Joseph J. O'Connell, Jr., of the Brookline police heard the motor of an automobile running.

He found Harry W. Smith, 50, an insurance broker, of No. 5 Winchester street, Brookline, sitting in the automobile, apparently overcome. Sergeant O'Connell summoned Dr. Almon J. Cooper, who pronounced Mr. Smith dead. Death was probably due to gas fumes from the automobile.

James D. Casey, campaigning for the School Committee, addressed large gatherings at rallies in Jamaica Plain, West Roxbury and Roslindale.

He told of the need of vocational courses adapted to the business needs of Boston, gathered from his own experience as a young man going into business from the public schools and now as an executive with a large financial institution.

SAVE A LIFE - STOP THE CLOCK OF DEATH

UNCERTAINTY IS FACTOR IN AUTOMOBILE MISHAPS

"SAVE-A-LIFE"

"Uncertainty in motion is the mother of accidents and certainty is the mother of safety," according to V. Altman of Racine, Wis., a noted expert on traffic problems, who is co-operating in the Boston American's "Save-a-Life" Campaign.

As an instance of this note what happened in Weymouth.

Little Desmond Gould, 12 years old boy, was crushed beneath the wheels of an automobile as he ran across the street with two companions. The others escaped, but young Gould was instantly killed. The driver of the machine was P. S. Hutchinson of East Weymouth.

Witnesses say that the three boys ran directly in front of the car. All drivers of motor cars will do well to read what Traffic Expert Altman has to say further anent careful driving. He adds:

"To find the main cause of accidents we must reach and search the human mind. It is a fact that all minds of our present drivers in the traffic field are affected by a disease that is fatally dangerous to human lives and destructive of property.

"The name of the disease is UNCERTAINTY.

"The name of the disease is UNCERTAINTY.

"Uncertainty is a guess of decision of direction of motion in the human mind in the traffic field."

The above, from V. Altman of Racine, Wisconsin, a student of traffic both in this country and Europe, who has lent his co-operation to the Boston Evening American in its "Save-a-Life" campaign, is food for thought.

And there is no better place to install this thought than in the minds of the children of today who will be the adults of tomorrow, with far graver traffic conditions to contend with, undoubtedly, than we can even imagine at present.

With teachers and parents lies the responsibility.

SPECIAL DRIVE

The Boston Evening American is finding that teachers are devoting much time to this training, and in addition to the regular safety first programs in schools many schools have inaugurated a special safety drive at this time in co-operation with the Boston Evening American.

At the Quincy School, Hudson and Tyler streets, the halls in the school are posted with pictures and stories furnished by the Massachusetts Safety Council, and clippings from the Boston Evening American's "Save-a-Life" stories, including pictures, are used in the daily instruction of the pupils.

This week, under the supervision of Miss Lillian Goodwin, a teacher, is being carried out efficiently.

A monthly report is obtained each month from Police Headquarters showing the number of auto accidents in the city. The accidents are discussed, dangerous intersections of streets pointed out, and maps are marked in red ink to indicate the corners where the greatest hazards exist.

Miss Goodwin declared that the school never before had such valuable assistance as that afforded it by the Boston Evening American in its "Save-a-Life" campaign.

The "Save-a-Life" Editor of the Boston Evening American will welcome information from other schools outlining the safety first work they are carrying on.

Children who are selected as "Save-a-Life" winners because they are following out the instructions of their teachers in crossing streets, and who live outside of Boston MAY OBTAIN THEIR REWARDS BY MAIL if they NOTIFY THE "SAVE-A-LIFE" EDITOR as to the date their names appeared in the Boston Evening American.

GOOD DRIVER REWARDED

A careful autoist and winner of a $20 gold piece in the Boston Evening American's "Save-a-Life" drive is "Honest" George B. Duffy, so-called because he returned a wallet containing $560 which he found some time ago, to the owner and received for his honesty a ton of coal, four pair of shoes for his children and a $50 bill.

Duffy who lives at 7 Neponset street, Revere, is employed by the Yellow Taxi Company, Charlestown, and was rewarded by the Boston Evening American for slowing down and sounding his horn before proceeding in heavy traffic at Mt. Vernon and Charles streets, Boston.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT AT WELLESLEY TOMORROW

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general of the United States, will be the principal speaker before the School of Politics at Wellesley tomorrow and Thursday. Her topic will be "Federal Government and Law Enforcement."

Professor Edward Curtis of the department of history will address the school tomorrow afternoon on "The Making of the Constitution." He will discuss economic conditions relating to its making. Professor Munroe of Harvard will discuss the topic, "The Unwritten Constitution."

IRISH POET ENDS 'LIVE FOREVER' OWN LIFE

London, Oct. 27 (I.N.S.).—Darrell Figgis, Irish poet and member of the Free State Dail, who came into prominence during the war with England, was found dead today in a room in Bloomsbury, with the gas jets turned on.

Figgis left a letter to the coroner, one for publication in the papers and two for friends in Ireland. The police took charge of the letters.

Doctors intimated there was not sufficient gas in the room to have caused death. It is considered possible Figgis may have poisoned himself.

"It is the only way out," declared one of the letters found in the room.

Tragic circumstances preceded the death of Figgis. Last week he was a witness before a coroner's jury and testified his great friendship for Rita North of Dublin who had died in London from the effects of an operation after Figgis had requested her to marry him.

The inquiry into the death of Miss North was not completed when Figgis went to his lonely Bloomsbury room and met death, apparently by his own hand.

By the side of his bed was a woman's handbag containing a lock of auburn hair. A newly-purchased jagger was also found.

One of the letters referred to recent troubles with regard to the death of Miss North.

The wife of Figgis committed suicide in Dublin more than a year ago.

'LIVE FOREVER' GROOM DEAD

Death has brought an end to the second honeymoon of Henry H. Messiah, wealthy retired builder of Waltham, who said when he married Mrs. Mabel Slack, his sweetheart of schooldays, last February: "I expect to live forever."

Messiah's end came suddenly while he was visiting friends in Weymouth. He was head of a new religious cult: "The Church of The First Born; Whose Name is Written in Heaven."

Revival of the romance between the aged widower and the comely Mrs. Slack, the mother of five children, came late last January and the couple were married within a few days after Messiah called at Mrs. Slack's Waltham home.

There after an exchange of greetings they renewed their love vows of childhood days and when the knot was tied they established themselves in Mrs. Slack's home at No. 272 Crescent avenue, Waltham.

Messiah's philosophies of life and love and his religious views brought him into prominence years ago when he retired from the building business to devote his time to the foundation of a new cult based on love. He said:

"For forty-two years Mrs. Slack and I never met. Now we have found each other. We have the same ideals—a common belief that love cannot be forbid. We intended getting married years ago but circumstances prevented. Now we'll let Cupid do his work."

HUB PALS LAUD DOOLITTLE

Lieutenant James Doolittle of the U. S. Air Service, who won for the United States yesterday at Baltimore the second leg in the Jacques Schneider international seaplane trophy race, is well known at the East Boston airport.

"One of the best fliers in the service," was the compliment paid him today by Lieutenant Robert Brown, commanding the army air squadron here, where Doolittle last Summer did his flying while attending Technology.

In a talk with a Boston Evening American reporter, Lieutenant Brown recited a long list of records hung up by Doolittle.

"His outstanding achievement," said Lieutenant Brown, "was the transcontinental flight alone in 1922 from Jacksonville to San Diego with only one stop—that at San Antonio.

He is, unquestionably, the best pilot in the army. If Doolittle had swapped places with the pilot of the British machine, which was second, he would have brought that machine in first."

Doolittle, according to Lieutenant Brown, left Boston last June for McCook Field, O., after he received his degree of Master of Engineering at Technology.

J. Linzee Weld to Wed Barbara Foster Saturday

Ceremony Will Be Performed in St. Paul's Church, Dedham, and Will Be Attended by Many of Hub's Social Elect

Betty Alden

BY WAY OF VARIETY TO THE all-pervading bud atmosphere of Boston society, comes an occasional smart wedding. Such an occasion will be Saturday's ceremonial uniting Miss Barbara Foster, daughter of the C. H. W. Fosters of "Castle Farm," Charles River Village, and J. Linzee Weld, son of Mrs. C. Minot Weld of Marlboro street.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH in Dedham, scene of many weddings of the elect, will contain a notably distinguished company—contemporaries and the bridegroom and bride's intimates, girls of the Vincent Club, the Junior League and the Chilton Club, and young Harvard men, the Somerset Club and Tennis and Racquet coterie.

MR. WELD GAVE HIS bachelor dinner some time ago to some fifteen friends out at the Hoosic Whistick Club in Mohkapoag—his guests including, of course, members of his entourage for the wedding, Messrs. Francis M. Weld, a brother, Samuel E. Peabody, Elliot Holt, Samuel K. Lothrop and Powell M. Cabot.

THE H. WENDELL ENDICOTTS (Priscilla Maxwell) sail on the steamship Paris on November 7, on the next lap of their leisurely and varied wedding journey. They go abroad for a considerable period, so present plans read, following an Autumn round at various Springs, Florida and Washington, where they were honored White House guests.

ALSO, THE PARIS takes over two interesting sub-debutantes—Miss Eloise Lawrence and Miss Anne Beckman Ayer, bound primarily for a Winter of study in Paris with the prospect of delightful jaunts with their chaperone here and there on the continent.

MRS JOHN SILSBEE LAWRENCE, mother of Miss Eloise Lawrence, contemplates a European stay of some two months later in the season, probably as chatelaine for her brother, Ray Atherton, of the American Embassy staff in London. And for Miss Lawrence there is in prospect that joy of joys to smart femininity, the presentation at court.

OUTBOUND FOR THE Mediterranean, Henry Brooks and his son, Henry H. Brooks, of historic Concord, are aboard the steamship Guiseppe Verdi, with ports of call at Lisbon, Palermo, Naples and Genoa. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Francis Law also are passengers on the Verdi.

THEY GO TO GENOA and the Italian Riviera, also the Autumn magnet which draws across the ocean Mrs. William Stone of Brookline and Bass River on Cape Cod. The Laws have their little daughter, Deborah, with them.

FARM PROBLEMS AT CONFERENCE

Springfield, Oct. 27.—The part of the commission merchant in marketing New England farm products will be told the delegates to the New England Conference at Worcester, November 12 and 13, it was announced here by Horace A. Moses.

Mr. Moses, president of the Eastern States League, will be chairman of the Conference session devoted to agriculture. A. E. Briggs, secretary of the Boston Fruit & Produce Exchange, has accepted an invitation from the Governor's Joint Committee to address the conference on the commission man's functions in relation to New England agriculture.

The survey of New England's marketing problem, being made in advance of the conference meeting by the joint committee, has developed the belief that the adoption of better marketing methods by the farmer would result in increased returns to him from the sale of his products.

FEWER, BUT BETTER APPLES IN 1925 CROP

Washington, Oct. 27 (A.P.)—The nation's apple crop this year was forecast by the Department of Agriculture today at 164,000,000 bushels, compared with 179,000,000 last year.

In making public the figure the department observed that the average person consumes half an apple a day, and that this year's crop is one of exceptionally good apples.

$150,000,000 BUILDINGS BILL BACKED BY COOLIDGE

Washington, Oct. 27 (A.P.)—The administration again will support a $150,000,000 public buildings bill at the coming session of Congress.

President Coolidge has not changed his views that such legislation is necessary to care for the public building situation throughout the country.

GALE BATTERS DELAYED SHIP

Aboard S.S. Degrasse, Enroute New York, Oct. 27 (By wireless to the Associated Press).—The liner Degrasse will be delayed until Saturday in arriving at New York as a result of the terrific storm which has prevailed the last three days.

Most of the passengers have not realized the intensity of the gale and the promenade deck has been crowded with those who spent most of the daylight hours enjoying the unusual marine spectacle.

Leaving Havre on the 21st, the ship met heavy seas which increased steadily during the next five days, but suffered little damage. Her speed was materially checked, however, and on the 24th a huge sea swept over the foredecks.

Sunday the height of the storm was experienced, a section of the forerailings being battered in. Today the weather had moderated appreciably.

Indican Test Shows Way to Get Back Clear Healthy Complexion

You simply cannot have a clear, healthy complexion, bright, wide-awake eyes and feel brimful of energy while there is Indican in your system, and your doctor will tell you so.

Thousands daily now are finding out how useless and time wasting have been their attempts to use beauty preparations to improve their skin, when the fault lies inside the body.

What Is Indican?

Indican is the danger sign which shows that the poisons and foul gases due to sluggish stomach, liver and bowels are seeping through your blood, into every muscle and every joint. These poisons are said to cause all kinds of serious diseases, such as rheumatism, gastritis, neuritis, even lung trouble, unless checked. Yet, thousands have Indican and don't know it until too late. YOU may think you are free from it, but a test may surprise you.

Can You Stand the Test?

Have urinalysis made and if the chemist reports Indican, or if you can't keep poisons and gases because of sluggish bowels, bilious attacks, sour, bloated up stomach, bad breath, headaches and poor appetite immediately start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills. Next have another test made in a few days and compare the Indican content to disappearance how much better you feel, even now.

Carter's Little Liver Pills not only make the stomach, liver and bowels work in a fine healthy manner, but also have been found to drive the Indican out of the system.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAIMED BY COOLIDGE

Labor "Well Rewarded," Nation Given "Many and Great Blessings," He Says

Washington, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—President Coolidge today proclaimed Thursday, November 26, as Thanksgiving Day, when gratitude should be expressed for "many and great blessings" which have come to the people during the past year.

The nation has been brought with safety and honor through another twelve months, the proclamation said, at peace at home and abroad, with the public health good, with harvests and industries productive and labor well rewarded.

The proclamation follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION:

The season approaches when, in accordance with a long-established and respected custom, a day is set apart to give thanks to Almighty God for the manifold blessings which His gracious and benevolent providence has bestowed upon us as a nation and as individuals.

We have been brought with safety and honor through another year, and, through the generosity of nature He has blessed us with resources whose potentiality in wealth is almost incalculable; we are at peace at home and abroad; the public health is good; we have been undisturbed by pestilence or great catastrophe; our harvests and our industries have been rich in productivity; our commerce spreads over the whole world, and labor has been well rewarded for its remunerative service.

As we have grown and prospered in material things, so also should we progress in moral and spiritual things. We are a God-fearing people, who should set ourselves against evil and strive for righteousness in living, and observing the Golden Rule we should from our abundance help and serve those less fortunately placed.

We should bow in gratitude to God for His many favors.

CALLS FOR THANKS.

Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their work and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and to seek His guidance, that they may deserve a continuance of his favor.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and fiftieth.

Calvin Coolidge.

COLD WAVE ON WAY TO HUB

Fair and colder weather is on the menu for New England for the next two days. A frost is predicted for tonight.

The storm rushing north from the Gulf States and expected to hit Boston last night has been sidetracked. Today it was raging in the St. Lawrence Valley.

The thermometer dropped several degrees during the night and this morning registered 44.

Exceptionally cold weather is probable before the end of the week. The lowest temperature recorded for the year came today from Calgary, Can., where the mercury was 3 below zero.

There is a storm area in the lower Rocky Mountain States, with accompanying milder temperature, however, and if this storm beats the Canadian blasts eastward the predicted cold spell will be delayed.

Montana and the Dakotas report snow while the southern States are having mild rains. The lowest New England temperature was recorded at Greenville, Me. Here the thermometer dropped to 26.

FR. O'REILLY, NOTED AUGUSTIAN, DYING

Lawrence, Oct. 27.—Rev. James T. O'Reilly, aged pastor of St. Mary's parish, is reported today as in a critical condition at the Augustinian rectory on Haverhill street. According to reports, the clergyman has remained for a long time in a state of coma, and little hope is held out for his recovery. Dr. John B. Bain, attending physician, has been keeping constant watch at his bedside.

While thousands of parishioners were praying for the recovery of Fr. O'Reilly, including the school children of the parish, members of the clergy in other cities were hastening to the bedside.

Rev. Nicholas J. Vasey, provincial of the Augustinian order, arrived yesterday morning from Philadelphia. Rev. George E. Loomis, formerly stationed in this city, arrived yesterday with scores of other priests from all parts of the State.

WOLLASTON IN OPEN WAR TO QUIT QUINCY

Taxpayers Charge Discrimination, Vote to Secede From City

A move to bring about the secession of Wollaston from Quincy was launched at a stormy meeting of the Wollaston Improvement Association, held in Masonic Hall, Quincy.

The project was broached after a score of speakers had assailed bitterly Mayor Perley E. Barbour and the Quincy assessors for alleged over-valuation of Wollaston property.

A protest committee was organized, headed by Constantine Lundy, to attempt to bring about a revaluation of Wollaston property through conferences with the board of assessors.

The organization of this committee was followed by a motion made by Carl Towne, secretary of the association, that a bill be presented to the Legislature authorizing Wollaston to secede from Quincy and form a township of its own.

The proposal roused a storm of discussion, and a vote was eventually taken which resulted in 28 ballots being cast and 26 against. A total of 49 members present failed to vote, and after a heated debate from the records pending further study.

Many of the speakers had charged that the Quincy board of assessors showed discrimination, claiming the valuation of property in Wollaston was much out of proportion to the valuations in other sections of the city.

Former Mayor Chester I. Campbell defended the administration, saying real estate speculators and not the board of assessors were responsible for the increase in valuation.

JOHN A. KELIHER READY TO QUIT, IS REPORT

Sheriff Will Withdraw Within 72 Hours, According to Rival Camps

Democrats, including Glynn, are marking time.

Certain of the candidates admit freely they are holding off in the hope that further friendly withdrawals will occur, with the result that the fireworks will probably be held for the last few days of the campaign.

Although Daniel H. Coakley and the district attorney are being watched closely in the hope they will step out of the race, up to date neither shows the slightest indication of doing so.

So it are going ahead with their rallies and proclaiming to the world at every opportunity that the Rock of Gibraltar is plastic and weak compared to themselves.

COAKLEY IN PEMBERTON SQ.

Coakley held a noon-day rally in Pemberton square today, under the windows of District Attorney O'Brien and the Good Government Association, dividing his remarks impartially against both.

He declared the G. G. A. had only one end, "to keep the garden variety of Yankee down, to keep the immigrant and sons of immigrants down, everybody down except the blood of that narrow crew who at the time of the Revolution were against Sam Adams, John Hancock and George Washington.

"This is the same crew of Tories who don't want anybody in power except their own bunch, who are sorry the U. S. A. is not still a colony of Great Britain."

Pointing at the district attorney's windows, Coakley said: "Little Tommie with his whitewashed windows; Tommie with his big horn glasses; says he's a fighter. He's a slap-you-on-the-wrist fighter; a radio fighter; looking glass fighter, a moving picture fighter.

"Oh, Tommie, what a beautiful bunking you got. They all said they were with him but now he's in the soup. Nobody's with him. He tried to knock-to the bunch up there (pointing to the G. G. A. office) but they bunked him too."

MARTIN SPEAKS TONIGHT.

Referring to Malcolm D. Nichols, Coakley said: "He has no more chance of becoming mayor of Boston than I have of becoming president of the United States. All the other candidates say I'm going to drop out but I'm the only one going through strong."

While Coakley was speaking in Pemberton square, announcement was made by Martin Lomasney that he will speak at an O'Neil rally in the Lowell School, Jamaica Plain, tonight, "to answer the challenge made by Coakley last night."

The district attorney claims to have received assurances of support from a large element which ordinarily would have followed the indorsement of the Good Government Association. His headquarters announced fifty Boston ministers had protested to the G. G. A. because of its failure to indorse him.

He is planning to speak from fifteen to twenty times daily during the balance of the campaign and will stage a whirlwind motor trip, speaking in every ward in the city, Thursday at an open-air rally at Pemberton square he will talk on "The Great Political Double Play—Curley to Coakley to Nichols to Innes."

O'NEIL CONFIDENT.

Joseph H. O'Neil said today:

"I have seen unmistakable signs of growing strength for my candidacy in several sections of the city where my rallies have been held this week, while the campaigns of the other Democratic candidates seem to be standing still, having attained the limit of their strength. The voters have realized that support of me is the only way to prevent the election of Malcolm D. Nichols."

James T. Moriarty, counted out of the race for lack of signatures, asked the courtesy of the press to convey his thanks to his many supporters for their loyalty to him. He added he wished to make it plain he has no interest in any candidacy and shall take no further active part in the contest. Mr. Moriarty said it was through no fault of the labor element that sufficient signatures on his papers were not certified.

CURLEY, JR., ON STUMP.

James M. Curley, Jr., eighteen-year-old son of Mayor Curley, will speak on the stump tonight for Theodore A. Glynn in the mayoralty campaign. It will be his debut in politics.

Young Curley, who is a prize-winning debater at Boston College, will be one of twenty-five youths from Boston College and fifteen from Boston University who will speak for Glynn every night until election day.

Mayor Curley and the Glynn forces, of which he is chief, refused today to back down as they did yesterday in another case where a permit for use of a municipal building was let to two different factions.

As a result rallies for both Glynn and John A. Kelliher are scheduled for tonight in the Municipal building at Hyde Park. A similar conflict last night was straightened out when Curley withdrew to avert a conflict with O'Neil supporters in South Boston.

RIVALS ON RADIO.

"The Kelliher forces evidently labor under the impression that there might be a waiver as in the case of Mr. O'Neil in South Boston, despite the fact the ball has been engaged for more than two weeks by the Glynn forces," said Mayor Curley. "There will be no waiver in this case or any future case."

Malcolm E. Nichols will speak on the radio from WREI tonight at 7:15. Understands Municipal Needs, Says Keliher

By JOHN A. KELIHER

In the next four years the city of Boston will expend over $400,000,000. To my mind the proper expenditure of that money is the supreme issue of this campaign.

We are facing during the next four years a critical period in the development of the city. Besides the manifold municipal departments that must be maintained at a high state of efficiency there will be many additional demands caused by the natural growth of the city.

In the expenditure of its public funds a government meets its most exacting test.

John A. Kelliher

KNOW CITY NEEDS.

I am offering myself as a candidate for Mayor because in a long and varied public career I have acquired by experience and familiarity a knowledge of municipal needs and an experience with national, state and municipal finance unsurpassed by anyone in this contest.

Whatever else my opponents say of me none of them deny that every political office I have ever held I was not merely an office-holder, but an active and efficient public servant.

During my eight years in the Congress of the United States I obtained more Federal appropriations for Boston than had my predecessors in fifty years.

I did not merely seek appropriations for the vain purpose of obtaining Federal money for Boston, I fought to obtain for Boston public buildings it was her right to have. I point to the renovated Custom House with its tower, the new Appraiser's Stores, and the humane Immigration Station at East Boston.

RETURN STATE MONEY.

Governor David I. Walsh appointed me as one of the Commissioners to construct the west wing of the State House. We completed our task with public commendation and returned to the State Treasury $40,000.

I have completely made over the new county jail since my term as sheriff. I maintain that these acts indicate my knowledge of the municipal needs of Boston, my ability to get results and my personal integrity.

In years of public service I have never been called before a finance commission or a Grand Jury. On the other hand, when I resigned as purchasing agent of the city of Boston under Mayor P. A. Collins to enter the race for Congress, I was given a clean bill of health by a critical investigating committee examining municipal departments. I point with pride to an honest, clean and progressive administration as mayor of Boston.

UNTIL the eve of the election of Mayor, the Boston Evening American will place at the disposal of the various candidates space in which to discuss the issues of the campaign.

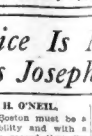
In the publication of this material, the Boston Evening American assumes no responsibility for either the ideas or utterances of the candidates, but presents them entirely as the views of the men under whose signatures they appear.

"Service Is My Slogan," Says Joseph H. O'Neil

By JOSEPH H. O'NEIL.

The Mayor of Boston must be a man of honor, ability and with a public and private record that fits him for the many duties of the highest office that may be bestowed upon him by the people of this city.

I have, and I say it with all modesty, all of these qualifications. I am also a member of the Democratic party which represents the majority of the people of this city.



J. H. O'Neil

There is not one of the candidates of the Republican party in this contest who represents the true aspirations of the rank and file of our citizens.

I have lived in Boston all of my life and I received my education in the school and graduated from the Quincy School in the old South Cove District as the Franklin Medal scholar.

OFFICE BOY.

I went to work early in life as an office boy in a wholesale shoe house in Boston and my salary was fifty ($50.00) dollars per year. A short time later I took to learning the carpenter's trade and worked in this line until I was elected to my first important public office.

In 1875 I was elected to the school committee. While serving on this committee I came in contact with the civic leaders of our day and the training that I received at that time was invaluable. Later on I was elected to the Legislature from the Old South Cove district, and then became director of public institutions and later City Clerk.

It seems appropriate at this time that when the question of party loyalty is being discussed to state that I rejected a certain election in Congress in 1884, because I was afraid that it might hurt the party that I loved.

I was rewarded two years later with the nomination without any contest whatsoever, and for the next six years I sat in the national House of Representatives.

Leaving Congress I was appointed Assistant Treasurer of the United States with the sole responsibility for more than $13,000,000,000 of public moneys.

SERVICE IS SLOGAN.

As a member of the very important committee of appropriations, I received an insight into the workings of our Federal government, and the extreme importance of economy and efficiency in all branches of the government and I very often presided over the deliberations of the House.

My slogan in all walks of life has been "service." This shall be my slogan when I am elected mayor of Boston. Since leaving public life I organized the Federal Trust Company and since its organization I have rendered "service."

As a trustee of St. Elizabeth's Hospital and of the Massachusetts General Hospital, I have rendered service."

Both Machine and Clique Wrecker, Says O'Brien

By THOMAS C. O'BRIEN.

The Good Government Association is wrecked today and will be of no further use in the city because it ran afoul of the O'Brien candidacy.

I said when I entered this fight that I would wreck any group or clique that did not represent the wishes and the will of the people and one by one these groups have been crashing and piling up in the scrap heap.

Thomas C. O'Brien.

Machines and cliques will be smashed in this fight as they have never been smashed in the history of the city, and the most complete wrecks will be those of the Innis', the Curley's, and the Goo Goos. I have put the Goo Goos out of business forever. No Democrat of Irish blood will ever sit with them in council again, to act as a masque behind which the Republicans can trick the majority of the voters.

Other candidates in the past have fought the Goo Goos and called them names, but I have ruined them and broken up their organization. For years they have been labelling candidates for office, just as you would label bottles in a medicine chest, indicating this one as harmless, the next one as beneficial, and so on.

On a few they have always placed the deadly label "poison—do not touch." Well, I have made them take down the most deadly bottle on the shelf—the one marked "Innes"—and drink it themselves, and today they are as dead as a doornail.

They are killed outright by an over-dose of the very poison against which they have been so long warning others. Now, instead of asking subscriptions to keep alive their humbug, it is in order for them to receive flowers for the funeral.

Of course they did not like to drink their own poison any more than Judas Iscariot liked to hang himself, but there was nothing else to do, after selling out for the thirty pieces of silver.

Alexander Whiteside has been passing around the plate for the silver for several years. Many months ago Alec was tied up by Innes, so in return for the coin that Alec has picked up, the Goo Goos had to deliver. They were never in such a hole.

They had a choice of being on the level, and taking O'Brien with a clean record of honest administration, or eating the black crow of Innes' record, and they have eaten the crow. No group of so-called nice people ever sat down to so foul a feast.

The next machine that I shall smash to smithereens is that crude contraption manipulated by Mr. Curley. Before the week is over I will send it into the ditch, and Curley and Glynn with it.

I shall go after Curley and Glynn and show them up, as dealing in the same sort of hypocrisy that I have exposed in the Goo Goos.

Most of the politicians are afraid of Curley and his heavy thunder Many more of them are in his power. Thousands of the people have been bluffed by him. I will show him and the citizens of the city, however, that there is one man not afraid of Curley. I shall blast the Mannikin Glynn out of his hands.

CHARGE FALSE OATH IN RUM UNION CASE

A bombshell was thrown by the defense in the conspiracy trial of the Chelsea Retail Liquor Union in the U. S. District Court today when Police Sergeant Walter A. Barden No. 92 Chester street, Chelsea, himself under indictment with Mayor Lawrence Quigley on conspiracy charges, declared that Nathan Isenberg, who pleaded guilty in this case, had come to him and told him he had signed false affidavits for the Federal authorities on the promise that he would not go to jail.

Barden said a week ago Isenberg and his wife visited the Barden home and said on a promise of leniency by Assistant U. S. Attorney Elihu D. Stone he had signed the false statements. Barden said Isenberg asked his advice as to how to retract the statements and asked who he should talk to, adding that he was a poor cripple and could not afford to retain an attorney.

Barden said he advised Isenberg to see U. S. Attorney Harold Williams.

Cross-examination by Assistant U. S. Attorney Hubert Thompson was short. After the witness had admitted he was awaiting trial, Thompson queried:

"Didn't you think it was funny that Isenberg should come to you for advice?"

"I did, but he said he was too poor to hire a lawyer."

"When you knew the law had been broken, you in your position as an officer did not notify the authorities did you?"

"I did not."

The defense called Mrs. Sadie Lee Retter, who said she was Barden's sister-in-law. She corroborated Barden's story of the Isenberg visit, although she said she had not heard the conversation.

SWIG ACCUSES COAKLEY BANK AGENT CHOICE

Protesting today in Supreme Court against amounts awarded liquidating agents of closed trust companies, Simon Swig, former vice-president of the Tremont Trust Company declared nearly $2,000,000 of the bank's assets had been wilfully wasted.

Swig told Judge Wait he protested the payment of $70,000 to W. Rodman Peabody, liquidating agent of the Tremont Trust Company. He said Peabody had not rendered efficient service to the bank and most of the work had been done by assistants to whom about $70,000 had been paid.

He declared it could be shown that Peabody had acted in the interest of opponents of the bank, and obtained only 25 or 40 cents on a claim when he might have got 100 per cent.

In response to a question by Judge Wait, Swig admitted that some one did a good deal of work when the report of the bank commissioner showed that $10,000,000 had been received at an expense of $300,000.

PICKED BY COAKLEY.

Swig said he was responsible for the appointment of Peabody, made on the recommendation of Daniel H. Coakley, who assured him if Peabody were appointed the bank would be doing business again within sixty days.

Swig declared it was the policy of the liquidating agent to make as poor a showing for the Tremont Trust Company as possible, and that he was not faithful in his official capacity.

"There was a whole army of employes in the bank wasting its money," he said. He added that the money remaining should go to depositors rather than to liquidating agents.

John Doxo, member of a protective committee for depositors in the closed trust companies, said he could have done better work than the liquidating agents in half the time.

ASSAILS HANNIGAN.

Joseph Doherty objected to the payment of $35,000 to John E. Hannigan as liquidating agent of the Prudential Trust Company.

Doherty said Hannigan had refused information as to the assets of that bank, when he (Doherty) was ready to pay 100 cents on the dollar for them. "We want to know what Mr. Hannigan has done," said Mr. Doherty. "If he has earned the money give it to him."

William H. McNary, formerly an officer of the Hanover Trust Co., said that the amount of money paid to liquidating agents was excessive. Judge Wait took the matter under advisement.

$2,280 IN SILKS STOLEN IN RAID ON R. I. MILL

WIFE OF SOMERVILLE POLICE SERGEANT DIES

Mrs. Anna D. L. Sharry, wife of Police Sergeant Charles J. Sharry of Somerville, died today in Somerville Hospital after a brief illness. She was born in Somerville and educated in the Forster Grammar and Somerville High Schools. Besides her husband, she is survived by a three-weeks-old daughter, her parents Mr. and Mrs. John B. Cameron, of West Somerville; four sisters, Mrs. Dennis L. Crimmings, of West Somerville; Mrs. Arthur J. Tellier, of Lexington, and the Misses Theresa and Margaret Cameron, of West Somerville, and one brother, Patrolman John L. Cameron, day officer in Davis square, Somerville. The funeral will take place Friday.

P. S. A. USELESS, O'HARE SAYS

Endorsement of a candidate for the Boston School Committee by the Public School Association means nothing, William G. O'Hare, candidate for re-election to that body declared at rallies in his campaign for re-election.

"The Association," said Mr. O'Hare, "is not in touch with the parents or the teachers or the problems of the children and the operation of our schools. Each year, just before election, it makes a great show of 'endorsing' candidates. Then it ceases functioning and is not heard of for another year."

"I am in touch with the schools and their problems. My nine years as teacher and the fact that I have three youngsters of my own in various grades of Boston's schools enable me to ably qualify for election to the School Board, without any fear whatsoever to my record in my previous term."

CHINA ELECTRIC FIRM IS UNDER JAP CONTROL

Nippon Government Chief Owner of Concern Handling U.S.-Made Phone Apparatus

New York, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—The China Electric Company, a distributor of telephone apparatus manufactured in America, is largely owned by the Ministry of Communications of the Japanese government and the Nippon Electric Company, it was revealed today by R. H. Gregory of Montclair, N. J., comptroller of the International Western Electric Company, testifying before the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the radio industry.

Mr. Gregory also said the Electro-Mechanical Company of Russia, one-fourth of whose shares is owned by his company, disappeared completely in the chaos following the Russian Revolution. The Russian General Electric Company has also dropped out of sight, according to previous witnesses.

Representatives of the commission said there was no international significance attached to the investigation, the object of which was asserted to be "to obtain information as to whether or not a radio monopoly exists."

YOU CAN APPLY FOR NEW AUTO PLATES NOV. 2

Goodwin Announces Date for Filing Applications; Gives List of New Fees

Applications for registering automobiles for 1926 will be received at Commonwealth Pier and at the various branch offices throughout the State beginning November 2.

All numbers issued at the pier and branch offices will be six-figured. Five-figured numbers, according to Register Frank A. Goodwin, can be obtained only by sending application and fee by mail to the pier direct.

Goodwin warns all motorists to make sure they know what the new fees are before sending checks. Otherwise, he says, they will be in for endless trouble.

So far as some makes of cars are concerned, he explains, it is easy to determine the proper fees, but there are types where certain models call for one fee while other models call for a different one.

HERE ARE SOME FEES.

To enumerate all the different models is impracticable, he declares, but in order to facilitate matters he gives the following brief resume:

Ford, Chevrolet, Essex, Franklin, Dodge, Dort, Durant, Maxwell, Chrysler, Gray, Star, Grant, Lexington, Liberty, Garner four and six cylinder—all models, $10.

Chandler, Jewett, Jordan, Roamer, Wills, St. Claire, Hudson (except Hudson model 6-54, where the fee is $20)—all models, $15.

Cadillac, Lincoln, Marmon—all models $20.

Buicks, all four-cylinder, $10; standard six, $10; master six, $15.

Studebakers, light six, $10; special and standard, $15; big six, $20.

Packards, twelve - cylinders, $25; eight cylinders, $20; six cylinders, $15.

The Nash is the most complicated of all. The six-cylinder with a 3¼-inch bore is $15, while the six-cylinder, with a 3¼-inch bore, is but $10. All four-cylinders, $10.

"Don't send cash with your applications," Goodwin warns. "Send either a check or a money order."

Heiress in Court

(International News Reel Photo.)

Countess Salm von Hoogstraten, formerly Millicent Rogers, heiress to New York millions, as she appeared in court to fight the claim of a lawyer for a fee of $9,119.

COUNTESS SALM BARES ROYAL SKELETON

Former Millicent Rogers, in Fight for $9,119, Says She Knew Divorce Secret

New York, Oct. 27 (Universal)—A slender figure in gray, with close fitting cloth hat and bobbed, chestnut hair, sat in a tiny court room facing 25 men.

This was Countess Salm von Hoogstraten, the former Millicent Rogers, making her first appearance in court.

At the outset she caused a stir by admitting that when she left the home of H. H. Rogers, her multi-millionaire father, nearly two years ago to become the bride of the titled Austrian whose name she now bears, she knew there was "some question" about the legality of the count's divorce from his first wife.

The countess' appearance was in response to a suit for $9,119 brought by Emil Kammerer, a Vienna lawyer, who claims to have been "employed" by her to win the recognition of the Austrian government of her marriage.

"When was it that you first learned that your husband had been married previously?" asked Arthur J. Stern, lawyer for Kammerer.

"I don't recall," was the countess' reply.

"Did you know of it before your marriage to him?"

"Yes, I did."

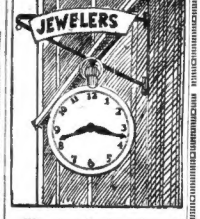
"And you knew then there was a question concerning the legality of his divorce?"

"Yes, I did. My husband told me there was something to be looked up, and straightened out."

The proceeding was a preliminary examination to the suit brought by the Vienna lawyer, and unlike the usual practice in such cases, was public. Justice Van Siclen presided.

She denied having retained Dr. Kammerer, although she admitted she knew he had been retained by her husband. She contended if anyone owed him money for services it was her husband.

Why?



Why do painted watches and clocks advertising watchmakers' shops and stores always point to the hour of 8:17?

Next time you mosey down the street take a look at the big clock hanging over a jewelry store entrance.

You'll notice the hour hand is painted pointing to 8 o'clock and the minute hand at seventeen minutes after the hours. And the same is true of nine out of ten of such clocks, actor-traitor Booth in the Ford Theatre.

Why?

"Abraham Lincoln was shot by the fire in Washington at 8:17 p. m.," a Summer street jeweler says.

"Figuratively speaking, the clocks of the nation stopped at that minute when the great President was shot.

"A custom grew up among jewelers to venerate Lincoln's memory by having all clocks stop at that hour. And the custom has continued to this day."

There's a reason with sentiment in it.

On the utility side, E. M. cites this reason:

"By painting the hands of the clock across the centre, as they are, the jeweler has plenty of space above and below the hands to paint in his name and location. That's the reason. What's your reason?

And if you have any other "Why?" send it to the "Why?" editor, Boston Evening American.

BOSTON TEACHERS NEED NOT LIVE IN CITY

The 1,600 teachers employed by the city of Boston who live outside the city limits will not be forced to change their residences according to the four to one vote of the School Board, which defeated the plan of Committeeman Edward M. Sullivan compelling them to live within the corporation limits.

Mr. Sullivan, who said that his whole idea in raising the question was to bring the teachers within reach of the city's tax roll in justice to other taxpayers, was the only assenting vote. Miss Curtis, Dr. Beansell, William G. O'Hare and Chairman Bogan all voting against the motion.

CROWDS INSPECT SEA FIGHTERS AT BIG NAVY YARD PARTY

NEW COMMANDER WELCOMES THOUSANDS OF PUPILS

Uncle Sam's Navy was host to the people of Greater Boston today. Boston Navy Yard in Charlestown was one of festivities and the occasion was "Navy Day," a national observance.

The local celebration was marked by great enthusiasm. Grown-ups and children flocked to the big reservation, every department of which, with the various types of fighting ships in the docks, was open for inspection.

Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, new commandant of the Yard, and his naval family were particularly interested in the host of school children.

LECTURE IS FEATURE.

The little folk were allowed with their parents and big brothers and sisters to explore the mighty wonders of submarines and the battleship Florida, the mine-layers Maury and Mahan, the mine-sweepers Lark and Mallard, the coast guard cutter Tampa and the beloved old frigate Constitution, for whose preservation they have done so much.

The program, lasting from 10 until 4, was in charge of Lieutenant-Commander Porter Adams. There was a lecture and demonstration of first aid in the dispensary building. At 11 navy divers gave a thrilling exhibition of sea diving. This was to be repeated at 4 o'clock.

GUARD IN DRILL.

Guardsmen on the Tampa gave an exhibition of life saving, including one of the breeches buoy. This took place at 11:30, 1:30 and 3:30.

A crane-hoisting exhibition was given from the decks of the old battleship Kearsarge.

The navy band played. Every ship was gay with flags and pennants, as were the yard buildings. Public and private buildings and dwellings displayed flags in honor of the day, which has come to be an event of annual importance.

PLANES DO STUNTS.

There was dancing and motion pictures at the Ingram Club. At 4 the chief outdoor spectacle took place on the spacious lawn in front of the commandant's residence. All the sailors, marines and workmen paraded, presenting a stirring scene. Addresses were made by Rear Admiral Andrews and guests, Governor Fuller and Mayor Curley were among those invited.

Navy and army planes buzzed overhead. It was a day into which were crowded instruction, enjoyment and patriotism. Visitors left with a livelier and more intimate knowledge of the purpose and work of their local navy yard.

Newport Welcomes Crowds for Navy Day Exhibitions

Newport, R. I., Oct. 27.—Torpedo launching, explosion of depth charges, sports and other events featured the local celebration of Navy Day.

The training station, torpedo station, war college, naval hospital and Army and Navy Association cooperated in making the day a success.

The naval training station was thrown open to visitors and an exhibition drill was given.

The naval torpedo station was also open, attracting a large number of visitors to watch torpedoes launched from a plane, together with exhibition diving and explosion of depth charges.

The War College for which guides were provided, set up a war game and explained it to visitors.

The hospital and Red Cross Convalescent Building were open to visitors in the afternoon, while the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. was open all day.

Navy at 150 Fights Back; Great Radio Program Tonight

Washington, Oct. 27 (I.N.S.).—The American navy celebrated its 150th anniversary today by fighting back at critics who heaped attacks upon it because of the series of recent naval disasters.

The occasion of Navy Day, marking also the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, was seized upon by high-ranking naval officers to assure the country that the navy is fit and ready for any emergency and will carry on, undaunted by misfortune or abuse.

This message went out not only from Washington, where the celebration centred but was ordered broadcast to the world from every ship and station that flies the flag. To prove its mettle, the navy invited the country to inspect its ships, its aircraft, its machinery, its stations and its men.

As a climax the navy tonight will put on the air, in one of the most far flung radio hookups ever attempted, three of its latest ideals to convince the nation that the Shenandoah crash, the S51 disaster, the wreck of seventeen of the latest seaplanes at Baltimore and other mishaps were the result, not of negligence and inefficiency, but of circumstances unavoidable ever which the navy, no matter how rigorous and exacting its care, had no control.

These officers are Commander John Rodgers, chief of the unsuccessful Hawaiian flight; Lieutenant-Commander Emery Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the Shenandoah, and Lieutenant Commander R. E. Byrd, chief of the naval detachment with the MacMillan Arctic expedition.

All this was part of the general campaign to restore "public confidence" in the navy.

While thousands watched in the Navy Day celebration at the Boston Navy Yard in Charlestown today, Chief Pharmacist J. A. Winterbottom (above) demonstrated the use of a litter from which a person cannot fall. Lower photograph shows Diver D. C. Farnshill, the man who went down into the sea and discovered there were no signs of life on the S51, in a deep-sea diving demonstration.

BELIEVE GIRL LOST IN WOODS

Lowell, Oct. 27.—Missing from home five days, Miss Amelia Dumais, 24, of No. 180 Lawrence street, is believed by her family to have been lost in the woods in Billerica or Tewksbury not far from her home.

A request to the police to search the woods for the girl has been made and it is expected that posses will be formed to beat through the underbrush.

Telling her mother she was going for a long walk, the girl, who has been in ill health for several years, left at 10 o'clock last Thursday morning and has not been seen since.

A month ago a fortune teller told the girl, in the presence of her mother, Mrs. Joseph Dumais, that she would soon meet with an auto accident or would be drowned. Since her daughter's disappearance Mrs. Dumais has brooded over the fortune teller's prediction.

Miss Dumais at one time was a school teacher. Later she was employed in a Boston store.

She is described as very slender, about five feet tall and weighing about 106 pounds.

TRADE OUTLOOK BEST IN 2 YEARS

Preliminary figures in the index of business activity for New England are the best they have been since 1923.

Figures on the retail store trade in Boston for the first three weeks of October show approximately 15 per cent. more business activity than for the same period last year, and there is every indication, if the business holds up, that October will be the best month of the year in the Boston retail trade. Cotton textile activity is picking up.

The charts in the statistical office of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston show these "encouraging symptoms."

Coupled with these are the various reports in the Boston Chamber of Commerce bureaus, which indicate that the worst period of New England depression has been safely passed.

MARTIAL LAW FOR CHILE THREATENED IN STRIKE

Buenos Aires, Oct. 27 (I.N.S.).—Martial law may be proclaimed in Chile as the result of the general strike there, according to reports received here today. All transportation lines are affected and business places are closed, but banks continue to do business. Street clashes in Santiago have resulted in a number of casualties, but no accurate reports of the wounded have seeped through.

LAMONT WAIVES EXTRADITION TO RETURN TO HUB

"This is Jim Lamont talking. I'll be in late this afternoon. I've waived all extradition rights."

That was the cheery greeting received today in the Federal Building by telephone from James S. Lamont, former president of the bankrupt stock and bond house of G. F. Redmond & Co., Inc., in this city, and on the receiving end in Boston was United States Deputy Marshal James A. Tighe.

Lamont was speaking from Portsmouth, N. H., where he was taken today to appear before Federal Judge James A. Lowell in the District Court of New Hampshire following his capture by Federal officers in a backwoods camp at Pittsburgh, N. H., only seven miles from the Canadian border.

Lamont under guard, is expected at the office of Deputy United States Marshal Perley B. Phillips in Federal Building late this afternoon.

In an interview with the Boston Evening American at Portsmouth today, Lamont appeared quite at ease in captivity and assuming a debonair attitude, calmly awaited the U. S. District Court proceedings.

"I must confess," Lamont jocularly remarked, "that the landing in New Hampshire is very good.

"Since occupying the camp in the woods I have enjoyed myself immensely and my only regret is the white light of publicity which now shines on me. Publicity is one thing I do not like."

In the Portsmouth court, Lamont was nattily dressed and kept up a cheery conversation with Federal attaches and newspapermen.

His arrest in the New Hampshire woods followed a long search by Federal agents, who wanted him on charges of converting and concealing assets in bankruptcy, in connection with the failure of the stock and bond house of which he was president.

His wife, Mrs. Grace I. Lamont, was released in $10,000 bail ten days ago on a similar charge.

George F. Redmond, treasurer of the defunct company, is at present in the Charles Street Jail in default of $25,000 bail, awaiting trial, and Mrs. Mildred Redmond, his wife, is at liberty under bail of $5,000, both charged with concealment and conversion of assets of the G. F. Redmond Company.

WORCESTER-SPRINGFIELD BUSES UNDER COURT BAN

Judge George W. Anderson in United States Court today granted a temporary injunction against the Farnum Sage Lines, Inc., of Worcester, restraining operation of buses between Worcester and Springfield. The action was brought by the New York Central Railroad, lessee of the Boston & Albany, asserting the buses were operating without license from the various cities and towns through which they pass.

THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL and ROSEMARY by Baroness Orczy

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

PETER BLAKENEY, a carefree young man, is in love with Rosemary Fowkes, but he forgets to propose, and Jasper Tarkington wins her. Rosemary, a writer, is induced to go to Transylvania and arrange a series of articles intended to clear the air of much international unpleasantness. Instantly she finds herself in the midst of a group of plotters. Even her best friends are arrested as spies, and though her husband is a great help, he always seems to fail in his efforts. So Rosemary decides to watch and wait.

Off to London, that was all Rosemary cared about now. To put an end to Peter's perfidy, to stop the publication of those articles. Did he think she would sit quietly and let him carry out his plans?

CHAPTER XXVI

PETER met Kervoisin's shrewd eyes fixed searchingly upon him. He gave a quaint, good-humoured laugh.

"Are you trying to make up your mind, sir," he asked, "just what kind of a blackguard I am?"

Kervoisin's thin lips curled in a wry smile. "I am not sure," he said, "that you are a blackguard. But I confess that I do not understand you."

"I may be wrong, but you don't look to me the sort of man who would go this dirty trick for mere gain. I am giving you the credit of desiring above all to save your kinsfolk, young and old, from certain highly unpleasant eventualities."

Kervoisin was silent for a moment or two.

"I would," he murmured after a while, "if one of the two letters you've got in your pocket were to make you act so and so."

"Exactly," said Peter.

"Then, Lord—"

"Peter," said Peter quietly in his turn, "and you know it. You know very well that you would have done the same if you had been in my place. Now here we have no time to lose. And yet lose words seem to me to have gained nothing by the interchange of our personalities. Let us keep cool and not lose our heads. I have the letters, you have the money. Let us exchange and then part friends."

"The sooner I am rid of the whole brood of them, the better I shall like it."

"I am sure you will." Peter said blandly. "Then perhaps you won't for them. You can post-date them, of course. I shouldn't then have to intrude on you again."

"You are very kind. The passports post-dated, say, a week from today will be in the bureau at your disposal whenever you like to call for them."

"I quite understand." Peter continued, as he handed Rosemary a packet to cover, "that you have the covering letter," he said simply.

Nanlescu nodded and he took the papers with a sigh of satisfaction.

Terms of Sale

Peter took up the paper. It was a receipt for the sum of forty-five thousand pounds sterling, in full satisfaction for the sale of the estate of Kisimire here described as the property of the Crown of Roumania. It was signed with Nanlescu's elaborate flourish, countersigned and stamped.

It was all in order. Peter folded the receipt, but before putting it away he said to Nanlescu:

"The whole thing, of course? is conditional on a free pardon being granted to Philip Imrey and Anna Haves, with permission to leave the country immediately. That was the original bargain between yourself and Lady Tarkington."

"They can clear out of the country the day the last of these articles is published in the Times," Nanlescu rejoined gruffly. "I'll arrange for that fool Maurus Imrey and his wife to clear out at the same time. Oh to London, that was all Rosemary cared about now. To put an end to Peter's perfidy, to stop the publication of those articles. Did he think she would sit quietly and let him carry out his plans?

PERSISTENCY WON MYLES LANE HIS GRID SPURS

RATED FIND OF SEASON

Star Hockey Player, Pitcher as Well; May Make Two Letters This Year

By BILL GRIMES.

Back in early September when the Dartmouth football players reported to Head Coach Jesse Hawley and his assistants at Hanover, a tall, well built lad was down in one corner of the field working with Eddie Lynch's squad of ends:

The smooth manner in which this boy ran down the field under kicks the speed with which he cut and the rapidity with which he started caught Coach Lynch's eye.

The end coach took this boy to one side and asked him if he was one of the freshman team last year, being a newcomer to the varsity. The lad said that his name was Lane and that he had been a back on Sid Hazelton's 1924 team.

"You go down to Jack Cannell's backfield squad," said Lynch. "We've plenty of ends, but we need some good backs." Down went Lane to the back field squad, but a couple of days later he returned to Lynch.

"I can't get anywhere down there," Lane told Lynch. But I think I can grab a job here."

"Not a chance, you go back with Cannell. They are looking for some backs," replied Lynch.

Lynch heard no more from Lane for about a week and then one afternoon he saw the Melrose boy run down the field with the ends after Coach Hanley's punt. Lane practiced with the end coach for a few days, but Eddie insisted that Lane return to the ball carriers squad after he had informed Myles that he would speak to Cannell about him.

Eddie Lynch went down one afternoon to watch the backs practice and got a line on this persistent fellow. He was fast and carried the ball well, but that was all. After watching Lane run with the ball a couple of times, Coach Hawley cried, "Damn that Lane, he is a great ball carrier but he does everything else wrong."

When Dartmouth played Norwich, Myles Lane was the third string left halfback, Robinson started for Dartmouth and he was later replaced by Jack McAvoy and after the star of the 1924 back field had shown his stuff, Coach Hawley sent Myles Lane into his first varsity game.

Before Dartmouth had finished rolling up their 59 points on Norwich, Lane had scored three touch downs and had jumped right up to the first varsity. From the first play he was in against Norwich Lane starred. He skirted Norwich ends, knifed through the line and received forward passes and threw them. He was the talk of Hanover that night. Against Hobart, Vermont and Maine Lane shared the honors with Jim Oberlander.

It is doubtful if any player ever showed more finish during his first big game than Myles Lane displayed against Harvard last Saturday. He failed to show the slightest concern before or during the game. To watch him warming up for the first kickoff, one would think that playing against Harvard before a crowd of 54 000 frenzied fans was an every-day occurrence with Myles Lane. Of course, Jim Oberlander's smashing runs and passes caught the eyes of all, but to the real student of the game Myles Lane's work compared favorably with that of Oberlander.

It has been some time since a more shifty runner has been seen in the Stadium. The cleverness with which Lane sidestepped and cut, his change of pace and the way he carried out all of his assignments was beautiful to watch. Not once did a Harvard player get a clean shot at him.

When a sophomore can deliver as Myles Lane did last Saturday he has a wonderful future. Lane will be a far better back next season, for it takes two years for any player to become perfect in the Jesse Hawley offense, which in fact, being recognized as the most deceptive attack ever shown the American football public.

Before Myles Lane went to Hanover a year ago, his athletic ability was known and appreciated by the fans in Greater Boston. He was a star athlete at Melrose High school. While a student at Huntington School, Lane played hockey with the Boston Hockey Club and last Winter he was on the defense for the freshman team at Dartmouth. He got his third class numerals last Spring at baseball.

Although Coach Denesha of the Dartmouth hockey team has his six first year's varsity team back for this season, Myles Lane will oust some defense man for his ability as a hockey player will get him a regular job.

Myles Lane will be Jeff Tesreau's mainstay in the box this coming Spring. Lane can also play a good game of ball at first base or the outfield.

Winthrop Contender for North Shore Title

The elongated youth with his foot in the air is demonstrating what he does when called upon to kick. This department of the game is ably taken care of by Tom Saunders, who is also a dependable ball carrier. In the inset is Captain Roger Titus, husky left guard, who tips the scales at 195 pounds and is the most powerful cog in a powerful schoolboy line.

By STED CHANDLER.

With a husky veteran line and a green but intelligent backfield, Winthrop High School is already casting furtive glances at the North Shore gridiron honors. Coach Poole's team was tested in five games before the league season opened Saturday, and then it provided a real upset in tripping over Lynn Classical by a one-touchdown margin.

After the first game had been tied with Chelsea, Winthrop lost a peculiar decision to Brookline. The latter won 6–3, although it did not register a single first down. A blocked kick proved to be a bad break for Winthrop.

The outfit then got under way and trampled Durfee High of Fall River, Watertown and Swampscott by respective scores of 13–0, 18–0 and 20–0.

Coach Harold Poole has a willing squad and an unusually husky line for schoolboy ranks, and it is not difficult to conceive of its riding through the remainder of the schedule in high gear. Lynn English, Beverly, Marblehead, Peabody and Revere are yet ahead and it looks like a tough assignment, but, barring injuries, the team should give a good account of itself.

Captain Roger Titus, who plays left guard, tips the scales at 195 pounds and is easily the "bulwark of the line." His running mate, however, is no slouch, for though he only stands a bit over five feet, Pelofsky weighs 180 pounds and is the fastest man in the line and a deadly tackler as well. The backfield stars are Quarterback Leighton playing his last year for Winthrop, and Tom Carnivelli, a halfback who is noted for starting his team's rallies by flashy runs.

The wings are taken care of by Cahill and Freeman, with Rex Sinatra and Rocca close on their heels for first string honors.

Coach Poole has four good tackles in Nelson, Rowe, Marratta and Crozeman, with the first two having a slight edge on the others.

Captain Titus and Pelofsky, the veteran stars, are found on either side of centre while the pivot position is handled by Fraser. He has a capable substitute in Aiken.

Jim Leighton at quarter is a reliable field general who has developed fast this season after serving with the second last year. Haley is held in reserve.

Left Halfback Tom Saunders does the kicking for the team and is a valuable ground gainer. Crocker also plays at this position.

Carnicelli and Treynor, the right halfbacks, are both good men, especially Carnicelli, who is a veteran with a good deal of experience back of him, and a consistently flashy performer. In the game with Swampscott he reeled off a pair of runs at sixty yards each and was the all-around star of the backfield.

A pair of husky line bruckers battle for the fullback berth. At present success has the call over Gray.

The backfield, outside of its inexperience, looks very good, while the line has proven its worth. Though the games remaining which lead up to the big clash with Revere on Thanksgiving present a formidable array, Coach Poole has confidence in his men, and they seem to have the same confidence in themselves; this is not expressed, however, in what they say as much as in what they do.

SUGGS SCORES EASY VICTORY OVER CELMERS

Chick Suggs, New England lightweight and featherweight champion, is today more firmly entrenched than ever as the world's outstanding featherweight as a result of his decisive victory over Joey Celmers of New York at the Commercial Club's show at Mechanics Building.

Celmers was game and willing. That's about all. He was completely outclassed by Suggs and rained blows on his plan.

After the bout the fans were willing to debate on Referees Jack Sheehan and Herman Grady. Celmers did not know better than to go the final boy against the speedy Suggs.

The first round was even. Celmers then stopped, while Suggs got going. For the next nine rounds Suggs hit Celmers with a volley of punches. He had the little New Yorker backing away most of the time.

The fans repeatedly called upon Referee Jack Sheehan to stop the uneven contest. But as Celmers stood up under the terrific punishment handed out by Suggs without flinching Sheehan let the affair continue until the final round had come to a close.

The three round defeat of Tom Kirby by Yale Okum caused even a greater surprise than Suggs decisive victory over Celmers. Kirby was a 10 to 3 choice over Okum before the mill started. The contest was supposed to be merely a warm affair for Kirby whom it was planned to pit against Mike McTigue on November 13 in this city.

Okum took all the fight out of Kirby when he knocked him down twice in the second round. Kirby was licked when he came out of his corner in the third round.

When Okum continued his attack, Kirby backed away to the ropes and without being hit took a nose dive to the canvas. He rested there while Referee Goodrich counted him out. He then arose to his feet and seized the arm of the referee as if in a daze.

Johnny Vacca of Brighton made a fine showing when he met over Mike Castle of Lawrence in ten rounds. Vacca fought from a crouching position, and had Castle baffled most of the time.

GOOD 'SUBS' LACKING AT HEIGHTS

By BILL CONSODINE

The main worry of the Boston [illegible] coaching staff at present is the shortage of good substitutes at [illegible]. The first team at the [illegible] season is to be a picked team [illegible] not give very much in the [illegible] games. But where the [illegible] is coming from [illegible] is a tough plant of [illegible].

When Coach Jack Dean [illegible] it looked like an easy matter to [illegible] Mike Harris in his position. [illegible] failed to satisfy as a regular [illegible] and Dean, in order [illegible] Durand and Jim Sheehan were placed [illegible] but neither of these two [illegible] the bill.

This week a few more of the [illegible] given a chance [illegible] If any more [illegible] Dean [illegible] with [illegible] Time of this [illegible] also received [illegible] Monday's drill [illegible] and a Boston College [illegible] pounds. His aggressiveness and speed [illegible] will [illegible] Dean [illegible] Another [illegible] Dean [illegible] Saturday [illegible] Miller [illegible] Harvard [illegible] Cavanaugh system to know how to play the game in the Major's way. Some subs will have to be unearthed for other positions in the line, during the week to come. Dick Hardy and Joe Akelaus play centre, the tackle positions with Warren McGuirk, who looks like one of the sensations of the year, at the other. It hardly seems possible that Dean will leave Merwick in during the entire game against West Virginia's West Virginia Wesleyan and Holy Cross, so that the latter will have to his already long list.

Steve Belenskie of South Boston was [illegible] in the Auburn game [illegible] the first time this year. He is a good centre and plays the roving game as Jack Heaphy did a few years back. Steve lacks the weight to play in there the whole game, but for a quarter or a little more, the stocky Southie lad has all the strength and pep in the world.

The end men have two or three subs with plenty of experience and the backs are a multitude with the exception of one position, fullback, where only Tom Smith seems to hold out. Al Weston is going to get his chance there on Saturday and Al has the makings if any critter on the Heights has.

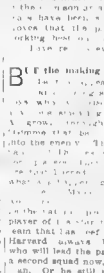
What Harvard Needs One Star Will Do It Coaches Have Limits Too Dark for Johnson

By NICK FLATLEY



Nick Flatley

THE boys who are wondering [illegible] is wrong with Harvard football [illegible] the answer staring them in the face, if they'd only look for it. The Crimson needs inspiration. Harvard lacks a couple of real natural born football players. The fault lies with the coaching. The [illegible] lies not at men football, in the [illegible] form, [illegible] and we [illegible] Harvard [illegible] Dean [illegible] team [illegible] finish would never be licked. There is criticism of [illegible] and fully [illegible] Dean [illegible] equal more than all [illegible] players have to be picked up first. They [illegible] that the young [illegible] can get an enough trouble [illegible] Pa [illegible] practice [illegible] than [illegible] have been [illegible] voice that [illegible] Dean [illegible] working hard [illegible] Harvard [illegible]

The Crimson [illegible] stop the [illegible] Dean [illegible] Harvard [illegible] Miller [illegible] player of the [illegible] team that has not shifted backs, as Harvard always has. The youth who will lead the parade may be on a second squad now, may be a freshman. Or he still may be running with some high school eleven. Sooner later he'll appear, and the coach that happens to be on the job will be hailed as a miracle man.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT LIGHT OF DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

All day the news flashes into the editorial office of the Boston Evening American. It is broadcast over WNAC at 11:30 A. M. and at 1:30, 4:30 and 7:30 P. M.

RADIO BRIDGE ON THE AIR TONIGHT

Plans have been completed to have bridge hands played over the radio by leading bridge experts in the principal cities in America. The first bridge hand to be broadcast will be put on the air tonight from 9 to 9:30, Central Standard time. As the hand is being broadcast by the experts the plays and bids will be explained in detail so that listeners-in will be able to play the same game as broadcast by the experts. Each bid and play will be explained in detail.

The bridge hands will be prepared and played by Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead, internationally known bridge authorities of New York. Both Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead will choose experts from cities where stations are located which broadcast the hands, thereby letting what is known as "this au" some court of bridge against local talent throughout America.

The following explanation was given by Paul A. Greene, manager of stations WNAC as to the details of the plan:

"The plan is to have four experts play a duplicate auction bridge and to broadcast each bid and each play of the deal together with the reasons for each bid and each play. Prior to each broadcasting, listeners-in will be informed as to the names of the participants so that on the night of the game any four may play the deal and each player be named after one of the four experts and take the same relative position at the table as that occupied by his expert namesake. The players will be told to have a pack of cards divided into suits, so that the cards as they are dealt and broadcast may be quickly selected from the pack by the owners of the draw for partners and deal will be announced, and then the cards dealt in each expert. The bidding will then follow, after which each play will be announced so that the players can play the same cards that the experts do.

In other words the auction bridge players of the country who have radios will have an opportunity to actually play the same deal played by four experts and to learn the reasons for each bid and play given holding or playing the same cards.

The first play will take place with Milton C. Work, Mr. Whitehead, E. Sheppard and Sidney Lenz as the participants. Different well known players from various sections of the country have been invited to take part in the series."

SINGS TONIGHT OVER WNAC

Rose Leverone, the well known mezzo soprano, who will sing in the program arranged by the Boston Evening American Orchestra tonight over Station WNAC.

RADIO INDUSTRY MONOPOLY, IS CHARGED

New York, Oct 27 (A. P.)—The American Telephone & Telegraph Company has net assets of $1,604,000,000 with outstanding common stock at a par value of $341,004,455, according to the testimony of Charles A. Heiss, controller of the company, at a hearing before William C. Reeves, examiner for the Federal Trade Commission, investigating the "Radio Trust."

Mr. Heiss testified that the company owned a majority of the stock of the Empire City Subway Company, Ltd., one of the most important electrical units in the city.

Counsel for the commission charged that this constituted a monopoly of the radio industry in New York, because any broadcasting not done directly from the individual stations must be accomplished by leading a wire from the place where the broadcaster is speaking to the broadcasting station through one of the Empire Subway Company's conduits.

Mr. Heiss said the telephone company owned 431,648 common shares of no par value, of the Western Electric Company, named jointly in the commission's complaint. He said the Western Electric had an issue of 500,000 shares of common stock. It was used by the telephone company as a manufacturing and supply company, he testified.

SENSITIVE SET HAS LIMITS

A powerful receiving set is liable to be quite useless in some places. Such interference as is caused by X-ray machines, elevator motors in addition from telephones and telegraph systems, will frequently put stations on a sensitive set.

No Lightning Danger

There is no danger from lightning striking a radio aerial if it is equipped with a good lightning arrester. In fact, the aerial acts as a protection from lightning when an arrester has been installed.

This Is Some Loudspeaker

Another queer freak in radio is reported from Paterson, N. J. William Bothyl, an engineer in the radio department, was trying out a new loud speaker recently. In adjusting it he detached the horn from the set. To his amazement, the music continued. The horn was removed to the next room, but still the music continued. Experts could give no explanation. The set was a home-made affair.

New Soloist With Orchestra This Evening

Rose Leverone, mezzo soprano, who has been heard from station WNAC frequently before, will appear tonight with the Boston Evening American Orchestra when it plays from this popular station.

It is the desire of William F. Dodge, director of this well-known orchestra, to present to the radio audience artists who are unusual, and in Miss Leverone he has such an artist. This soloist is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, and has sung in many recitals throughout New England.

ROXY TO BE ON THE AIR AGAIN THIS WEEK

"Roxy and His Gang" will return to radio via WEAF, New York, at nine o'clock on Friday evening, October 30, for an hour's program before the microphone in WEAF's studios and thereafter once a week at [illegible] p.m. Such a hour will be announced.

Requests for information as to what his type of program would be have met with Roxy's characteristic answer: "All I know now is—Hello Everybody." Whatever has followed that in former days has depended upon the time, the place, the artist and, of course, Roxy He has re-cently returned from a short trip to Europe and has been busily occupied grouping "His Gang" for broadcasting

FINE PROGRAM TONIGHT OVER WBZ

Famous pianists and other great concert artists have been heard over the air on several occasions during the past few years, but the forthcoming series, contributed by Steinway & Sons to the cause of greater music appreciation in the United States, marks a new era in radio broadcasting.

It will also be the inauguration of the first complete programs to be contributed by the conservative musical interests of the country in which the greatest masters of the piano, the violin and concert hall will participate.

One of the features of this series will be the contribution for the first time of the concerts in full recital form, just as those rendered by the great artists to select audiences of music lovers throughout the country.

The first concert of this series will be broadcast by Stations WBZ WJZ WGY and WRC from 8:30 to 10 o'clock this evening.

William Mengelberg, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, will direct the first concert program by 50 members selected from the orchestra.

Josef Hofmann, the world-famous pianist, will give a piano recital and Fraser Gange, well-known for his renditions of oratorio music, will be the baritone soloist.

It was originally announced that the special festival hymn, composed by Mr Mengelberg for orchestra and baritone solo, would be rendered for the first time in America at the first concert of the Steinway series.

The original manuscript, however, has been lost in the mailing of the newspaper copy, and Mengelberg has been endeavoring to write the festival hymn from memory, but he recently announced that he would be unable to complete the composition in time for Tuesday evening's concert.

EFFICIENT METHOD OF ARRANGING LEAD-IN

An efficient window leading connection may be made by shellacking two circular pieces of tinfoil three inches in diameter, on the inside and outside of the window pane. This forms a series antenna condenser with the glass as the dielectric. The outside is connected with the outside piece of foil, while the one on the inside of the glass goes to the antenna binding post on your set.

Give Set a Fair Chance

Never judge the performance of your receiving set after only one evening's reception. Wait for more favorable atmospheric stretches of from two to three weeks when radio receiving conditions have been decidedly poor.

MAKING YOUR BUDGET BUDGE

NO matter how carefully a budget is worked out on paper, it is guaranteed not to budge for you unless you do your share. No ready-made budget in the world will exactly fit your individual case. Before it works for you, you will have to work for it, taking it up here and letting it out there. Experiment with it until it works and then stick to it; and if you proceed honestly and intelligently, you will find presently that it will go like clock work. With your honest co-operation, there isn't a chance in the world for your budget to fail to make good.

I am wondering if, perhaps, the following apportioning of your income will be as helpful to you as the first budget I planned? For some it may be even more helpful, and learned statisticians tell us that it is an excellent budget to follow. This budget number two, as we will call it, starts off with the approved 10 per cent. of one's income to be laid aside for investment and savings. Operating expenses, which include rent, taxes, upkeep and somebody once a week to help with the heavy laundry and cleaning, 35 per cent. 22 per cent is allowed for food, 12 per cent for clothing, 17 per cent goes for advancement, under which I read some doctor's and dentist's bills, education, books and gifts, and last of all 2 per cent. for theatre tickets and other small extravagances. Imagine a family of three has an income of $2,000 worked out according to this budget—$200 will go to investments and savings (10 per cent), the 20 per cent for operating expenses (rent, taxes, service, etc.) will give you $570, 22 per cent. for food will allow $437 a month for the table and with careful managing 12 per cent., or $174, can be made to cover clothing; and there will be $117 for the advancement fund (doctors, dentists, etc.); 8 per cent. for luxuries gives you $60 a year for real extravagances.

I think you will find that a checking account will be one of the greatest helps to you in keeping this household budget. The usual difficulty is in getting together the necessary substantial deposit which most banks require before they will start a checking account, and, of course, this can only be done by saving. You may think that you cannot save, but if you have a really definite desirable object that you can only get by saving, I think that you will find that you can and will save. The main thing is to decide upon a regular sum, don't make it too large, and put it in the bank every Saturday—don't even wait to pay a single bill. You may come out short the first few weeks, but you will gradually adjust your expenses to take care of your savings deposit. No matter how small an amount you can spare, spare it regularly. Many banks will take a deposit of $100 for a checking account, and once you are the proud possessor of this, make it an ironclad rule of paying all of your bills of any size by a check, and then by turning through your checks you can always see just where your money went and how much you have left. Carry in your purse only just enough cash to cover your immediate daily expense and get the husband to co-operate with you on this, too, for if there is extra money in your pocket, or in his, all sorts of things will happen to take it out—small loans with our friends who so often forget to return, joining friends in lunches more expensive than you can afford, and picking up bargains that you wish later were back in the shop.

WTIC HEARD IN QUEENSLAND, AUSTRALIA

1XG, the experimental and short wave length station of WTIC, at Hartford, Conn., has been heard in Australia. Ernest J. Lord of Bowyn Hills, Brisbane, Queensland, Australia, owner and operator of QSL-A, picked up signals from 1XG at 5 o'clock in the morning of August 28th at the time the Travelers station was calling a man down in Brownsville, Texas.

WESTERN STATION TO COME ON AIR SOON

Spokane, Wash., the home town of Senator Dill, one of radio's best friends in Congress, is soon to have the first high-power broadcasting station, it was learned today. And since Spokane lies east of the Cascades, reception of the station in the Atlantic Coast States is believed assured. The new plant's call letters are KHQ, which will be recognized as one of the first broadcasting groups to be known on the air.

•Radio Conferences Called

Secretary Hoover has called a Fourth National Radio Conference to meet in Washington on Monday, November, 9, 1925. This conference is the most important one in the series, for its report will undoubtedly direct or influence legislation affecting broadcasting. Most broadcasters consider this a crucial meeting, and will be on hand determined to protect their radio investments which he did not even attempt to disguise.

"We part the best of friends," he said suavely, "my dear Monsieur Blakeney."

"Oh! the very best," Peter assented.

THE BLACKGUARD

Peter did not shake hands with either of the two men, but he caught Kervoisin's glance and gave him a pleasant nod.

And when Peter finally went out of the room the general, breathless, perspiring, nerve-racked, threw himself into a chair and exclaimed:

"Did you ever see such an unmitigated young blackguard!"

Kervoisin made no comment, but asked abruptly: "What are you doing to prevent the lovely Una from putting a spoke your wheel?"

"Doing?" he retorted. "Why, I've already done everything, my friend. My courier starts tonight for London with Lady Tarkington's letter and manuscript. He will be in London on Monday evening. On Tuesday he will call on the editor of the Times. Ostensibly he is Lady Tarkington's messenger. When he has delivered the letter he will ask for a reply. That reply he will telegraph to me. Then we shall know where we are."

"What about friend Number Ten?" Kervoisin remarked dryly.

"Well," Naniseau retorted with his affected smile, "I imagine that friend Number Ten will be the most surprised of the lot."

DREARY WAITING

At Kiss-Imre the day dragged on eaden-footed. Luncheon then a ong afternoon, then dinner. Time went on and Elza had not returned.

Rosemary was ready, dressed for the journey; her suitcase was packed. She was only taking a very little luggage with her as she had every intention of returning as soon as her errand in London was accomplished. She would not for no world have left Elza alone too long with her troubles.

Indeed the oddest deed which she had carried through appeared to her now not only in its hideousness but in its futility. What could Elza hope to accomplish? Did he imagine for so little as to imagine that she would merely call the coup de grâce the adverse blow of Fate and quietly sit down under it, be content to send one wire which would be intercepted?

No power on earth could stop her from going to London or to the uttermost ends of the earth if she had a mind. No one. Least of all Jasper!

But in the meanwhile Elza had not returned. Time went on, slowly but certainly. Unless Elza was home within the next half hour Rosemary could not start for London before the next night.

Jasper, at Rosemary's request, telephoned to the "Pannonia" and to the "New York," the only possible places where Elza might have put up for the night. There was then nothing to be done.

But the next day was even more trying than the one before. Anxiety for her friend was added to the heavy load which Rosemary had to bear.

Jasper, on the other hand, had become both helpful and sympathetic. Already the day before he had announced his intention of accompanying Rosemary to London. At first she had protested.

"LET ME GO FOR YOU"

But when the morning of the next day went by without news of Elza, Jasper was ready with a fresh suggestion. "Let me go to London for you," he said. "I could see the editor of the Times and ask him in any case to withhold publication until he heard from you."

Rosemary hesitated, then with a frank gesture she put her hand out to him: "I think I ought to carry my own business through myself," she said. "You understand, dear, don't you?"

"Tell me how I can serve you," he said, "but in God's name don't go away from me."

But though he was so kind, so unselfish, so generous, Rosemary could not respond in the same way as she had done in the past. Her confidence in him had been wavering for some time, whenever those wild outbursts of ungovernable passion, when he claimed her body and soul as he would a slave or a chattel, had outraged as well as mystified her, and she could not free her mind from that vision which she had of him in the mirror yesterday, when his mouth parted in a cruel, harsh grant.

The dual nature in him puzzled her.

At the same time she did admit quite readily that he was very helpful and kind in the present emergency, and gladly did she accept his final offer to motor straightway to London to see if she could find out something definite about Elza.

"If she was not at Clu," he said, "I would go on to Ujak; and, in any case, I can be back about eight o'clock."

The suggestion was so practical that Rosemary felt really grateful. She walked with him to the village where he garaged the car that Naniseau had lent him.

"I don't know how I shall live through this day!" she said.

Jasper was very self-contained and practical. He waved Rosemary an airy farewell, and very soon the car disappeared down the road.

Give and Take

DRAWN BY DOROTHY FLACK

ONCE-UPON-A-TIME there were two princesses, one was the Princess Give and the other the Princess Take. Both were beautiful, both were much sought after, but somehow the Princess Give was much the more popular of the two. Princess Take, outwardly, was the more beautiful, and at first everyone rushed to her side, leaving Princess Give all alone. But after a while they drifted back to Princess Give and were her firm, fast friends always.

Why? Well, Princess Take had a disposition afflicted with what is popularly known as the "Gimmies." She was showered with jewels and wonderful gifts from her admirers—and she took them as her due, without any thought of the giver.

Princess Give was just the opposite. A smile for everyone and a pleasant word and a charming sympathy were hers and she shared them with everyone. And everybody loved her. How could they help it?

Which are you? Which would you rather be? Be careful, for Love loves unselfishness and generosity and he's never lurking around selfish, mercenary, arrogance—no matter how beautiful.

—DOROTHY FLACK.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Roumania

MY BIRTHDAY

IN our royal families, birthdays play a great part.

Although I shall be fifty next [illegible] I love my birthday and like people, both great and small, to remember it, for days of congratulation are also days of good will.

Generally my dog or dogs are the first to greet me, and bright-colored ribbons are tied around their necks, and they come rushing in, very self-conscious and proud, followed by my maid with her hands full of flowers, and perhaps some small gift from any one of my children who is not able to be there.

HER MAJESTY MARIE QUEEN OF ROUMANIA

I hurry to dress, making myself look as smart and nice as possible, so as to do honor to all those who come to congratulate me.

My door is watched by eager servants of all degrees, each hoping to be the first to wish me luck, long life "for the good of the country and for those who love you" is the usual formula.

Then comes the family meeting. The band plays before the house and everybody brings a gift of some kind, each according to the stretching possibilities of his purse.

At the breakfast table stands a big cake. Before the war it used to have as many candles as I had years. But during the war, candles were so expensive that, as my years were many, it was given up and not begun again. Now a solitary candle burns in the middle, which is cheaper and less age-revealing!

Later the cake is divided amongst the poorest children of the place.

All day long people keep pouring in with their flowers and good wishes, all the towns of the country are decorated with flags, and Te Deums are sung in every church.

The older I get, the more fervent the wishes. And there is a quite special moral in this—which I leave you to guess!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) Recently I had lunch with my father in a New York restaurant. For a 2 o'clock lunch was the following menu proper: Grapefruit, lobster salad, sago pudding.

Should it salad be placed on the plate under it, and apart from the bowl? I transfer mine to my plate, but recently I saw it eaten otherwise and I wondered if I were wrong.

(3) If soda crackers are too crisp to be broken, how should they be eaten?

(4) Is this paper and ink proper for a girl of 17? I have hinted that I would like a buff-colored paper with a monogram of gold. If I should get it would it be perfectly appropriate?

(5) Are gilt-figured linings in envelopes good taste?

THIS menu that you ordered for lunch with your father was perfectly proper, and, since it is now about 2 o'clock, I am very much tempted to try it myself.

(2) The salad should be left in the bowl with the plate under it. The waiter will give you another plate, and on to this, with the help of a fork and serving spoon that should be placed with the salad, you transfer part or the whole of the salad to your plate.

(3) I am afraid the only way you could eat a soda cracker is to break off a small piece at a time, whether or not the soda cracker is crisp. As a matter of fact, you should be thankful that it is crisp for that shows that it is fresh.

(4) Your letter paper is a good size for a girl of 17, and of a pretty good texture. But personally I do not like letter paper in such a decided shade as you need in your letter to me, nor do I very much like buff-colored paper. There are few kinds of paper I think more distinctive and in better taste and form than white or [illegible] light gray. Why don't you change your [illegible] to a white paper rather than buff color? Instead of having the colored paper why not have the paper monogrammed in different shades?

(5) Gay linings are in very good taste in envelopes when the paper is plain. They are in especially good taste for young girls of your age.

MAKING A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"THE Earl will never marry, I suppose," Jennie observed. "He's got too."

"Some day I'm going to get him over and bring him into this house and show him how it is blooming with new-found happiness and real, flesh-and blood folks, and that will cure him. I though you'd like to know who's your landlord and—why."

"The agents didn't tell us," I complained.

"They had orders," Mr. Perry said tersely.

"Why did you tell me?" I asked. "Because a woman as kind and strong as you won't mind helping poor Bertie come back to sanity. And some day I'll saw you to finish the little drama for me—and to give it a happy ending," said Mr. Perry.

"It's exquisite," Jennie whispered.

This was amazing from a Harrison. It had nothing to do with the oft-expressed conventionality of Jane's family traditions. I wondered if Jeanie had changed more than I knew—if her suffering over Baby Pat's death had given her new standards of judgment or if she was merely being impressed by the glamorous personality of our visitor. But I found myself hard put to it to decipher Jeanie then or all during the meal.

Mr. Perry's warm, simplicity and large unselfconsciousness made a pleasant impression on me. I had a sense of quiet security as he planned about the living-room changing a bit of tapestry here and taking down a bit of pottery there. And if it had not been for the oddness of having a stranger as a dinner guest and for Jeanie's strangely simple and intently eager manner, I should have said that it was quite delightful if somewhat unconventional.

"I haven't been in this house since the old Earl's solicitor came and got Bertie," Mr. Perry explained as he came down from a step-ladder he had mounted to change some sketches which were set along an almost ceiling-high upper moulding.

"It was in perfect order when we came," I said half skeptically.

"May Valleau did that," replied our visitor quietly.

"That's why she wanted to come and take charge," I smiled half to myself.

"She's been here then?" asked Mr. Perry.

"She wanted to work for me."

"Better have her. Nice girl. Nice family. French-Canadian stock. Worth helping. May's stolid but good. The remarkable one is little Arlette. She's around my place a lot. Likes art. Filled with beauty. Wonderful child. As ethereal as Maeterlinck."

"She sounds interesting," Jeanie said dryly. "I'd like to meet the paragon."

"I'll have you over sometime soon. I'll really be awfully interested in having you meet little Arlette, Miss Harrison."

"Her sister said the child posed for you," I began half-conscious of what I was saying. "May Valleau called you—"

"A crazy artist," supplied Nicholas Perry as I stopped, startled by the words I had almost spoken. "I'll have you over to see for yourself.

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

WHEN you take "cold you simply take in germs by breathing them into your nose, throat and lungs.

Your neighbor breathes the same air loaded with the same germs and does not take cold.

Why? And why didn't you take cold when your same neighbor did?

You didn't take it then because your vital resistance, your power to repel the invasion of your body by germs was not below par.

That's the whole secret of not taking cold—keep your vital resistance at par.

Here are a few simple rules the observance of which will best enable you to do this very thing:

(1) Keep cheerful and thus help to keep the circulation of your blood, especially of your skin, in the best possible state.

(2) If you are well keep active, and if your occupation is sedentary get out of doors some every day.

(3) Don't overwork.

(4) If your vitality is lowered by previous disease, stay in a warm, even hot, but well ventilated room at times of epidemics of influenza or of colds.

(5) Avoid excesses in alcohol and tobacco, both of which tend to produce acidity of the system and thus to make it hospitable to germs.

(6) Be sure to take a daily bath with friction of the skin and thus help to keep open the pores through which poisons escape from your body.

(7) Wear appropriate clothing, especially heavy woolens, that prevent evaporation from your skin. It is equally important to avoid wearing too little clothing which exposes the surface of your body to the debilitating effects of a cold atmosphere.

(8) Keep your bowels freely open and thus avoid the absorption into your system of debilitating poisons that tend to accumulate in sluggish intestines.

(9) Flush your kidneys by taking half a pint of cool, refreshing water on arising and by drinking an abundance of fluids with your meals, unless to do so interferes with your digestion.

(10) Keep your system alkaline by making fruit, especially citrous fruits, a large part of your daily diet, and during epidemics, by taking an even teaspoonful of sodium bicarbonate in a glass of water two or three times a day.

(11) Eat an abundance of food, but without an excess of meats or of any other one element.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

WHY I HAD TO HAVE MY MATTRESS DONE OVER.

By Foxy Grandpa

NOW if there is anything I like it is a nice comfortable bed. This business of its being healthy to sleep on a hard bed may be all right—but I like a soft bed and a nice, smooth, even one. And so does Bunch, our cat, I've noticed.

One morning, I said to Mary, our maid:

"Mary, do you know something is wrong with my bed? It's getting lumpy. I don't understand it."

"I'll look at the mattress this morning, Foxy Grandpa," said Mary immediately.

After she had finished washing the breakfast dishes, Mary hurried to make the beds and then she came in to me.

"There's nothing the matter with the mattress, Foxy Grandpa," she said, "except that I think it would be better if you didn't pull out the little balls of string which tuft it and hold the hair in place.

"What are you talking about, Mary?" I asked in a puzzled way.

"They've been disappearing little by little—every time I change the bed I notice it. I thought perhaps they bothered you and you were pulling them out.

Bunch left the room just at this time and after her went her pride and joy—her young son, a dear kitten the only one of her family which we had not given away and, of course, being an only child, I'm afraid Bunch spoiled him. But you know how mothers are with an only son.

As Bunch and her son left the room, Bunny gave me one of his mysterious looks.

"You look as if you knew some thing about it, Bunny," I said.

"Yes," nodded Bunny. "I don't like to carry tales or scandal on people. But I have my suspicions."

"I don't want you to be a tattle-tale, Bunny," I said. "But I would like to know about this thing."

"Think I can show you this evening, Foxy Grandpa," Bunny said reluctantly.

We went into the sitting room after dinner and I heard Mary call:

"Here, Bunch! Here, puss, puss, puss. Come get your suppers."

At that moment, Bunny motioned me to follow him. I closed my cross-word puzzle book, which I had just opened, got up and followed him down the hall.

Quietly he pushed the long ball in my bedroom. There was a low light burning in it by my bed on the night table.

We stood at the door. Bunny said nothing but nodded toward the bed with his left ear.

I looked. There was Bunch sitting rather anxiously on the foot of my bed and there in the middle of the bed was another bunch—under the cover.

Bunch gave one of these impatient, purring cries which cats do sometimes and the bunch under the covers moved and then came out.

And what do you thing that bunch had in his mouth, because, of course, you know what was under the covers? Bunch's son. And in his mouth was one of the tiny tufts!

No sooner was he out from under the covers with it, than he started rolling the tuft around on the floor and playing with it.

"Just get him a five-cent rubber ball, Foxy Grandpa. It will save your mattress," said Bunny, stroking his whiskers and looking very important.

Mrs. Smith, allow me to present Mr. Brown.

A also says that "allow me to present" should only be used when introducing one in a high station in life. M. S.

INDEED, I am glad to settle the dispute, and I thank you for giving me the privilege. One of the constructive "signs of the times" in the United States is the increasing number of "disputes" about questions of etiquette. And isn't it surprising and interesting how much one can learn by arguing these points?

The expression "Meet Mrs. Smith" is never in good form, and it should always be avoided. It causes a large percentage of jokes in funny papers and vaudeville shows?

"May I present Mr. Brown?" is better than "Allow me to present Mr. Brown." "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Brown?" is always good form when introducing a gentleman to a lady. The station in life makes no difference. If at times you think that this formula for introduction is a bit too formal, it is perfectly correct to mention only the names, "Mrs. Smith, Mr. Brown." These forms that I have mentioned are the two forms most in use now.

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

"If I were you, I wouldn't work very hard. I'll tell you," said a wage-earner, a personal friend.

"You would like to be a loafer?" I asked.

He kind of gulped. "No-o; I don't mean that I would like to be a loafer, altogether. But I would take life blamed easy. I think you're a fool for working as much as you do. Why in thunder do you do it? You're there!"

"I work a lot because I would rather work than loaf. And how long do you imagine any fellow who has gotten there would stay there? Isn't it true that many look upon work as the worst curse in the world? Isn't it true that many think of work simply as a means for making money?

I recently ran into August Heckscher, the many-sided business upbuilder and philanthropist, whom I had not seen in two or three years. When I remarked that he had been very active, he remarked: "Yes, fairly so. I hope that I have been able to be helpful." This wonderful entrepreneur finds joy in constructive achievements and in giving away money for worthy purposes.

But old men are not the only ones who work for the love of doing things.

Take for example, John Hertz, of Yellow Taxi fame. He has made more money that he can ever hope to spend. He told me not long ago that he wouldn't dream of giving up his work as he felt under obligation to expend his very best efforts on behalf of the thousands who have become interested in his enterprises.

Few men in America work longer hours or more earnestly than John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in he ambitious to roll up more millions? Not at all. He spends less time in money-making than in studying and intensifying how to give away money wisely.

Edsel Ford, notwithstanding all his millions, spends more time and thought on his work than do any of his eight hour workmen. I do not imagine for a moment that his dominating motive is to accumulate money, money, money.

How about Thomas Alvees Hammond, Jr., the inventive genius? His father is rich, but this young man is giving his whole heart and mind to accomplishing things, not because he is mercenary, but because he loves to overcome obstacles.

It all gets down to this: Unless you can learn to find happiness in putting something into the world you are likely to find that happiness merely in collecting or spending your dollars.

WARNINGS ON MARKET NOT POPULAR

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Warnings that the bull market is not going to last forever and that we should not hold stocks indiscriminately are not popular just now.

Writers of brokerage house letters have themselves to blame in part for his condition of things. They have said: "Wolf, wolf!" many times, like the shepherd lad in Aesop's fable, and there has been no wolf. Nevertheless, some day the wolf, in this instance a bevy of successful bears, will be on hand. Meanwhile we can remember that the bearer of bad tidings is never met at the rail road station by a brass band.

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who visited Boston to witness the launching of the U. S. Lexington in Hingham's subsidiary plant at Fore River, declares business in the steel world was never better. "The year just passed is the second largest in volume in the history of steel," he says. "The year wasn't the best in profits, but the profits are ahead of the average. We are hopeful the present year will exceed anything ever experienced by any industry."

E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, estimates that tourist traffic is worth $136,000,000 a year to Canada. Incidentally, President Beatty planned recently to address a railroad men's gathering in Boston and was greatly disappointed when he was forced instead to send a letter of regret that he could not come here at that time.

Boston and the rest of New England has long been deeply interested in the sugar issues. I am told American Sugar has for years been one of the ten stocks most largely held in this section. Lee, Higginson & Co. conclude a discussion of the sugar situation with the following: "The low price of sugar naturally reflects itself in the low prices of sugar securities. These prices have now reached a level which offers an attractive basis, in many cases, for a safe, long pull investment, particularly in the large producing companies in the actual commodity."

Expansion of the New England Power System, with inclusion of other New England and New York state companies, will be larger than first announced. Eastern States Power Corporation was formed Monday under laws of Maryland, with capital of 100 shares preferred, 500,000 class A common shares and 750,000 class B common shares, all no par value, to be the holding company for the New England end of the enlarged power system. New company is empowered to finance and underwrite issues, to act as fiscal agent and deal generally in securities.

H. L. Harriman, president of New England Power Company, in director of the new concern, together with F. L. Carlisle, W. K. Dick, H. E. Mackaye, J. E. Schoellkopf, Jr., C. N. Carlisle, R. K. Ferguson, R. J. H. Hutton, C. E. Norris and Paul A. Schoellkopf. Principal addition, as previously announced, is that of the Schoellkopf interests of Buffalo, which include the Niagara & Eastern Power Corporation.

Francis Hastings, for the past twenty years specializing in real estate securities with Hutchins & Wheeler & Co., tells me he has acquired the good-will and records of that concern and will be glad to serve under his own name at the same location, No. 30 Kilby street, for dealing in real estate investments and real estate brokerage.

SUGAR AT NEW LOW FOR PAST 10 YEARS

Breaking through to a new low of 1.31-32 cents, c. & f., or 3.74 cents duty paid, Cuban raw sugar has reached its lowest level in the past decade, except for one brief period, testifying to the continued lack of confidence on part of holders in the present sugar situation.

Colonel Mitchell Has Made His Case

Why Is He to be Tried?

Before "the great jury of the people" Colonel William Mitchell, United States Army, has made his case against the maladministration which is to blame for the condition of aviation under the Stars and Stripes.

Already public sentiment, North, East, South and West, has handed down a verdict in his favor.

Now Colonel Mitchell is to be tried by court-martial because he dared appeal to the American people to rescue aviation from its present plight, and emancipate our fliers with the Colors from the control of non-flying officers who insist upon regarding aviation as the step-child of the Army and Navy, instead of welcoming it into the household of National Defense as the youngest member of the family.

Colonel Mitchell's main charges regarding the abuse of aviation have been substantiated before President Coolidge's Air Board by nearly all of the flying officers permitted to testify, from Major General Mason M. Patrick, Chief of Air Service, down to the youngest naval aviator, with a few exceptions.

Colonel Mitchell's major recommendations for the reorganization of our National Defense system have not only been endorsed in principle by Major General Patrick, and a majority of the flying officers of the Army who have been called as witnesses by the Air Board, but also commended to the attention of the President by the American Legion, in national convention assembled at Omaha.

Nevertheless, Colonel Mitchell goes on trial this week because he dared to tell his fellow citizens of the United States the truth about aviation, as he sees it, without asking the permission of the enemies of aviation in control of the military machinery of the War Department.

This is why our fliers' fight for freedom involves more than the military career of the brave truth-teller, who took his case directly to the people.

This is why our fliers' fight for freedom involves even more than the future of aviation.

This is why our fliers' fight for freedom involves the right of the American people to know the truth about aviation from the only officers in the Army and Navy competent to tell the truth, namely, the flying comrades, with the colors, of Colonel Mitchell.

This is why the trial of Colonel Mitchell directly concerns every American citizen who takes his sovereignty seriously.

Boston's Election Law

It Has Been Tried and Found Wanting

One week from today the citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who are registered voters in the capital city of Boston, will elect a Mayor for a four-year term.

Regardless of the result of the election, the present campaign has gone far enough to prove, as the Boston Evening American believes, that the law under which next Tuesday's election will be held has been tried and found wanting.

In theory, the Boston City Charter provides for a "non-partisan" election, having for its purpose the election of the choice of the majority for Mayor.

In practice, the Boston City Charter has failed to eliminate partisanship from the campaign, and there is no assurance that the successful candidate in next Tuesday's election will be the choice of the majority of those taking part in the election.

Under these circumstances it seems only fair that each and every candidate for Mayor, in advance of the election, should tell the people of Boston whether he favors a change in the Boston City Charter, and, if so, what change he favors.

Such a campaign as the one now drawing to a close has produced little intelligent discussion of the issues involved, and a great deal of unintelligent and unjustifiable abuse of the candidates engaged in the contest.

Until the city of Boston can hold an election for Mayor in which the people can be protected in their right to determine the choice of the majority, and can have the benefit of the discussion of real issues, the city of Boston will be the loser.

A change in the Boston City Charter should be made under the leadership of Boston's next Mayor by the Massachusetts Legislature at its next session.

OfCourseWeAre'Intolerant'

We All Like Ghosts and Hate Geometry

The learned Dr. Livingston Farrand, president of Cornell University, is distressed by the "intolerance" in this country.

He says it is "almost incomprehensible." But it isn't incomprehensible, it's as plain as day. We like our old, easy, superstitious lines of thought. We hate new ideas and exact knowledge.

When you see a dog on the stage, or in the circus, walking on his hind legs, you know that, as soon as possible, the dog will get down on all fours. He has only recently learned to walk on his hind legs, it's a painful operation, and he stops it as soon as his master, with the whip, turns his back.

Thinking, to human beings, is what walking on its hind legs is to a dog.

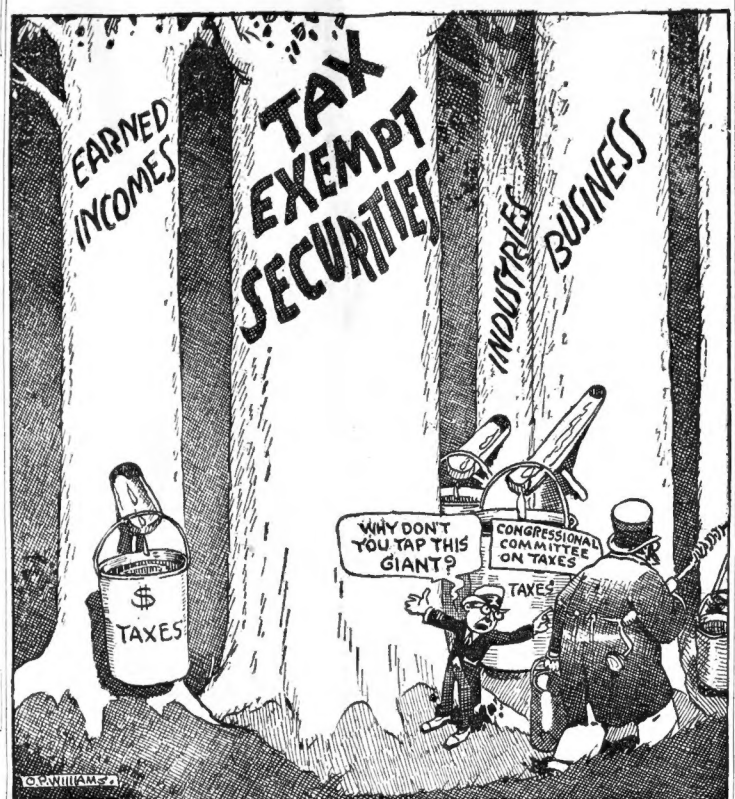
We have only recently LEARNED to think. It's a painful operation, and we stop thinking when we can.

Ghosts, spirits, ectoplasm, fortune telling, all such things appeal to us. For with such things we are at ease, like the dog standing on four legs.

Change the subject from ghosts to the fact that the sum of the angles of any triangle are equal to two right angles, and you lose half your audience. You lose the other half if you quote Herbert Spencer's wonderfully compact and clear definition of evolution, which runs as follows:

"Evolution is an integration of matter and a concomitant dissipation of motion, during which the matter passes from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity, and during which the retained motion undergoes a parallel transformation."

Passing by the Big One



TAX exempt securities encourage extravagance by States and municipalities that issue them. They divert investors' funds from the productive uses of industry and commerce. They help only unearned incomes, not incomes earned by productive effort.

The tree of tax exempt securities is big enough. Unless its growth is checked it will overshadow and choke other trees about it, and we will have not a forest of activity, but a single tree.

Furthermore, if you tap this tree of tax exempt securities you will not only check its too great growth, but you will relieve the drain upon the other trees which need growth.

Those other trees are productive and reproductive. The tree of tax exempt securities issued by States and municipalities provides only shelter and shade for those who do not need it.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THERE have been so many robberies in Chicago lately that lots of families have hired two or three cooks in order to keep their kitchens filled with policemen.

A COP in the butler's pantry is worth two at Headquarters.

IT won't be long before the chief of police will have to send out to a private home every time he wants an officer.

IT'LL keep the detectives busy looking for the policemen.

INSTEAD of putting the call boxes on street corners, they'll have to install them in kitchens.

THE cops can then telephone the sergeant without getting off the cook's lap.

ONE cook had fourteen policemen calling on her regularly. She used their badges for clothes pins.

EVERY time there was trouble in the neighborhood, the cops had to run out in the back yard and grab their stars off the line.

ONE housewife always had so many officers in her kitchen that she was afraid to pick her husband's pockets.

IT got so bad that they even kept the patrol wagon in her garage.

THEY left their guns lying around the kitchen so often that it wasn't long before she began finding bullets in the hash.

THEN she understood why her husband always used to say "Shoot me the mashed potatoes."

SHE thought the officers would be a good protection, but her home was burglarized the other night while there were seven policemen in the house. The only room that wasn't robbed was the kitchen.

SHE lost ten thousand dollars worth of stuff but luckily, the cops didn't lose a dime.

THE burglar, however, was caught the same night. The little boy next door ran over him with his bicycle.

THE cops aren't to blame for visiting in kitchens. A policeman can't expect the cook to walk up and down his beat with him.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "THE ETERNAL PARADOX."

SOME girls may SEEM slow
But when it comes
To the man one LOVES
Or to a WOMAN one
SUSPECTS, ALL women
Are FAST
THINKERS.
At least, they THINK
They think, but ACTUALLY
It is MOSTLY IMAGINATION; for
A woman IN LOVE
DOESN'T think, and
A JEALOUS woman
CAN'T.
WOMEN, it seems, are not MEANT to think,
That's why most of them
ACT like they do;
They are the ETERNAL PARADOX.
A woman is an
EMERGENCY can act
NOBLY, and invariably
DOES; yes, in a CRISIS
She can be HEROIC;
Yet, let a HUSBAND be
LATE for DINNER or
Praise his STENOGRAPHER
TOO LAVISHLY and—
Well, words fail!
There are not enough
To do the subject justice.

THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters Must Not Contain More Than Two Hundred Words. No Anonymous Communications Will Be Considered

Salt for Fatigue.

To the Friend of the People:

Have any of your readers used common salt for fatigue? I heard the other day that many workers in heated quarters, after working hard, use a mild solution water that has salt in it to relieve weariness.

CHARLES T. MAHONEY.
Boston.

(A professor in the University of Birmingham, England, has advised salt in water in small quantities to relieve lassitude in workers in a high temperature.—Ed.)

Type of Judge Needed

To the Friend of the People:

Keep Judge Dubuque of New Bedford in the limelight. He is the type of judge needed in these times. He declares: "No lawyer need ask me to grant probation for any crime of violence."

These are strong words. They strike at the nerve of the crime craze. We think much of our judges and their decisions, but this judgment of the New Bedford judge rings true.

J. CALDER GORDON,
Somerville.

Jam on the Cars

To the Friend of the People:

It requires a person of saintly qualities to ride on the subways during the busy hours.

If you take a car at the subway on Boylston and Dartmouth streets going east, any afternoon at about three, just look for a jam.

The cars roll along with pupils from some school hugging the entrances of the cars, when there is more room in the centre.

I asked one of the guards why he didn't ask the people to move into the centre, he coldly replied: "It was not none of my business to do this."

Woman's Police Bureau

To the Friend of the People:

The Boston League of Women Voters would be glad to have opinions sent to its headquarters, No. 8 Joy street, concerning the value of a Woman's Bureau in the police department of this city.

This bureau is to be a separate unit, concerned specially with the protection of women and children and to be conducted by women.

MRS. MARY TENNEY HEALY,
President of the Boston League of Women Voters.

Mitchel Field.

To the Friend of the People:

After what person is Mitchel Field, Long Island, New York, named?

Is it after Colonel William Mitchell, now being tried by court-martial in Washington?

SILAS ROGERS.
Boston.

(The field is named after John P. Mitchel, once Mayor of New York City. He was killed while flying an air machine in Texas in 1918.—Ed.)

Health in Dishwashing

To the Friend of the People:

Here is a new argument for dishwashing. The ordinary dishwashing with plenty of soap suds is fatal to the germs of such dangerous diseases as pneumonia, diphtheria and blood poisoning. Germs do not take to soap suds. Dr. John E. Walker of the State Laboratory of the Army and Navy Hospital, Hot Springs, Arkansas, has made this discovery and calls upon everyone who wants to get in touch with a good germ destroyer in home use to take to dishwashing.

CHARLES T. MEACHAM.
Melrose Highlands.

Kindness to Animals.

To the Friend of the People:

Mayor Quinn of Cambridge is urging kindness to animals upon the youths of his city through the teaching of the public schools.

It is unaccountable how some youngsters like to torture an animal. They get off in a vacant lot, away from the sight of everyone, and then begin their work upon a helpless dog or cat.

Lessons of kindness in school life now being urged by Mayor Quinn should be followed up by schools in other localities.

CAUSE AND HEIGHTS OF THE TIDES

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Will you kindly explain why there is low tide on the Pacific Coast at about the same time that there is low tide on the Atlantic Coast, when the moon is over the Atlantic Coast?—W. J. F."

THE tides seem to be a perpetual puzzle to most people, and I will try, once more, to make the matter plain, but only a general explanation can be given, for the details are complicated and require difficult mathematical treatment.

Nevertheless the underlying principles are quite simple. Both the moon and the sun produce tides, a fact that introduces one of the many complications, but for our purpose we need consider only the action of the moon, which is much more effective than that of the sun.

Moon's Attraction

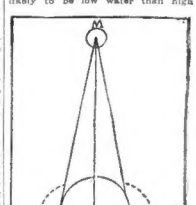
A diagram is essential to an understanding of the subject; take, then, the one that I have drawn. The little arrows around the circumference of the earth show the direction of the tide-generating forces of the moon at the points indicated. The moon is supposed to be off toward the right-hand side.

Its attraction draws up the water over about one-quarter of the earth's circumference, and also causes, by differential effect, a corresponding heaping up of the water on the opposite side (the earth being, as it were, drawn away from the water). But over the two opposed quarters of the circumference, whose centres are situated at right angles to the direction of the moon, the tidal forces are directed more or less toward the earth's centre, and consequently produce a relative lowering of the water in those regions.

Now, the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, in the latitude of New York, are about one-eighth of the earth's circumference apart, as indicated on the diagram. Both of them, therefore, fall simultaneously within one of the areas where low tide prevails. They may not be at exactly the same phase of the tide, but both are inside the low water region. Similarly, when one of the high water areas passes over them, they will be simultaneously included within it. This explains the reason for the coincidence of which you speak, but it does not explain why the tide is low at the very moment when the moon, being overhead, should make it high.

To understand the reason of the apparent contradiction, we must remember that the earth is in rapid rotation on its axis in the direction indicated by the curved arrows. The result of this rotation is to carry the waters of the ocean continually eastward from under the moon, and, owing to the inertia of the water and the smallness of the tidal force compared with the gravitation of the earth, the time of the arrival of the crest of the tide lags far behind the time of the passage of the moon over the meridian.

The interposition of the continents in the path of the tide, thus breaking the ocean into separate parts, the variation in depth of the water, the inclination of the shores of the continents to the axis of the advancing tidal wave, and many minor causes, unite to widen and vary the difference between the time of the meridian passage of the moon and of the tide, so that, in a general way, it may be said that it is more likely to be low water than high water when the moon is on the meridian.



Parallax of the moon
The Astronomer considers only half the total angle as AMC

Charts of all the oceans have been repeatedly made showing what are called "co-tidal lines," i. e., lines running through places where the arrival of high and low tides are simultaneous, but even yet complete accuracy has not been attained, and the precise course of the general tide waves is more or less doubtful.

Height Varies

The height of the tide varies enormously at different points on the same coast lines. This is owing to variations of depth of water and of shape of the shore outlines. At New York the average Spring tide is about 5½ feet, while at the Bay of Fundy it often attains 60 feet and even more. The tide runs up the Hudson beyond Albany, where it attains a height of several inches.

Where the water affected is only a hundred miles or so across the convexity referred to the curve due, or to the direction of the plumb-line, is hardly noticeable. The tide in Lake Michigan at Chicago is less than two inches, and entirely negligible compared with changes of the water level caused by the wind. In the middle of the oceans the height of the tides is from two to three feet.

VISION IN CHURCH

By Temple Manning

IN the little town of Caravaggio, in Lombardy, Italy, there stands an old-time church. Here the natives go for confessions and for blessings.

While most of the inhabitants have lost sight of the church's supernatural visitor, there are many of the older people who still remember the first appearance of the apparition that so frightened the congregation back in 1882. In their hearts remain the constant hope and fear that they may again behold the vision during their hours of devotion.

A writer in the London Journal, who witnessed the spectacle, described the awesome visitation as follows:

"Every day, at noon, the vision of the Virgin Mary rises from the dark recess behind one of the pillars of the aisle, and the struggles of the thousands of eager devotees to catch a glimpse of the apparition are most extraordinary. The shrieks and screams of the victims who are knocked down and trampled on amid the confusion are appalling. Those who cannot approach near enough to the shrine throw handfuls of copper coins against the iron grating which encloses it, and the shock of the metallic sound, amid the deep monotonous intoning of the priests, seems to produce a frenzy in the crowd, many of whom rush wildly about, shrieking and tearing their hair, and treading without mercy on the limbs of the paralytics outstretched on the pavement. The simple village church, which is capable of containing only a few hundred people, is made to hold 10,000, who, although packed, suffocating, perspiring and trembling beneath the stifling atmosphere, yet continue to howl out their invocations. When the dismal howlings of the pilgrims within the church announce the appearance of the misty vapor which precedes the apparition of the Virgin the crowd outside fall to the ground, and literally cry forth the litany composed for the occasion, and the litany is succeeded by a dead silence.

Even before the first visit of the apparition this interesting Italian village was famous. It was known as the birthplace of the seventeenth century painter, whose name is identical with that of the town—Caravaggio.

It is twenty-two miles east of Milan and has a population of about 8,000 people.

YOUNG GIRL SHOULD STEER CLEAR OF OLD MEN

"Why is it that a woman cannot be friendly with men she meets in a business way, without the man presuming that this is an invitation to him to make engagements for dinners, theatres, and lunch?"

Recently a young woman, who had left her small town home and is now employed in a large city office, made the foregoing remark:

Continuing, she said: "I don't care to go about with men old enough to be my father. Why should men 45 or 50 think they are attractive to a young girl? It seems to me that they should realize that when a young girl does accept an invitation of this sort it is because of the entertainment which they could not get otherwise, and that is the only reason for going."

You go into the leading dining rooms of the big hotels in the large cities and you will see scores of old fellows, with double chins, and wrinkled necks and plenty of gray hairs having "dinner parties for two," with girls not half their own age.

Foolish girls to accept these invitations with gay old dogs!

They are putting themselves in an unfavorable light to those who note the disparity of ages.

Self-respecting girls should not compromise themselves by associating with old men.
